Fixing Dollar Value Seen as Gold Rise Halts; Morgan Sees Roosevelt

With Figure at $33.56, President Believed Ready to Act.

No Change Made For Three Days

Attempts to End Flight of Capital Abroad Also Hinted.

By Elliott Thurston.

Henry Morgenthau, jr., takes command of the Treasury today, coincident with evidences that President Roosevelt has either called a temporary halt in his gold price manipulations or is nearing a revaluation of the dollar.

Official enlightenment continues to be lacking, but the day brought forth these diverse developments.

1—For the third successive day the R. F. C. price arbitrarily fixed for purchases of newly mined domestic gold was left at $33.56, or a point close to the figure at which the Administration is believed ready to declare a revaluation of the dollar.

Confirmation Lacking.

2—New York dealers in foreign exchange, according to the Associated Press, heard from Government sources unofficially—and no official confirmation was forthcoming last night—that export of capital was to be banned in order to halt further flight of American capital into foreign currencies or securities and thus arrest the precipitate decline of the dollar due to this cause.

3—Apparently upon assurances from the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, to the Bank of France, the French minister of commerce announced that he had postponed for "several days" his proposed trip to London to discuss Anglo-French protective measures against the dollar, and French officials indicated that they were not going to apply a surtax on imports from the United States at this time.

Morgan at White House.

4. J. P. Morgan, accompanied by Myron Taylor, of the United States Steel Corporation, was an unannounced White House visitor. He eluded the press for a time, and when his presence was discovered, the White House explained that he had merely been at tea with the President and Mrs. Rosevelt. However, rumor promptly concluded that Mr. Morgan, who broke his customary silence to applaud the President's embargo on gold exports in March, had wished to recommend moderation of the gold policy and early stabilization. Whether he had the chance, over a teacup, to put in a word with Mr. Roosevelt was not revealed.

5. Prof. O. M. W. Sprague, who left a lucrative advisory post with the Bank of England to become a now sidetracked Treasury adviser, called on his former Harvard pupil, Mr. Roosevelt, to present a resignation, in protest over monetary policy, but left the White House evidently persuaded to "sleep on it." He refused to say a word about his hostility to what he considers unsound monetary "novelties," but

Morgan Call On President Is Surprise

"Purely Social" Visit, Says White House; Banker Declines to Talk.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

John Pierpont Morgan, head of the most influential American banking house, late yesterday spent 30 minutes with President Roosevelt in the residence of the White House. It was explained he came for tea and the visit was "purely social."

The present head of the House of Morgan never before had called at the White House. Only twice before in the history of the country had a member of the Morgan banking family entered the White House portals, it was recalled by veteran observers here.

Mr. Morgan was accompanied by Myron Taylor, chairman of the board of the United States Steel Corporation. On leaving, Mr. Morgan declined to answer questions, explaining "it would not be proper for me to discuss what I talked to the President about."

Not on Calling List.

The call of the financier at the White House was learned by accident. His name did not appear on the list of callers for the day, nor was any announcement made in regard to the visit until after it became known. It was then that White House attaches insisted the visit was "purely social," and absolutely contained no significance.

In substantiation of this contention, it was pointed out that Mrs. Roosevelt was present throughout the period Mr. Morgan and Mr. Taylor were with the President, and that her presence would preclude any discussion of business or governmental matters.

One version offered to clear away the mystery which enveloped the meeting was that Mr. Morgan happened to be in the city and indicated a desire to see the President. Mutual friends, it was suggested, arranged the invitation to tea, which was served in the family reception room of the White House in order to allay speculation regarding its importance.

In this connection, it was recalled that when Gov. Montague Norman, of the Bank of England, was in this country last August President Roosevelt was informed the Britisher desired to see him. At the time much was being said and

Jeers Anger Connally at Ballot Probe

Yells by Huge Crowds Prompt Threat to Move Hearing.

New Orleans, Nov. 16 (AP).—Thousands of political factionists today stormed the Scottish Rite Cathedral, where the special United States Senate committee has been conducting investigations into the election of Senator John H. Overton, and Chairman Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas, and Senator Overton were forced to enter the building up a fire escape and through the ladies' washroom.

The crowd had congregated in front of the building, jamming the steps before the locked doors and stopping traffic in the street. The gathering was composed of men and women of all political factions and all walks of life.

The crowd got into an hilarious mood when it saw Senator Connally climb the fire escape and began yelling jibes at him. When they heard the senator had gone through the washroom, yells went up about "another Sands Point affair," and "don't get socked in that washroom."

Crowd Hilarious.

They were referring to Senator Huey P. Long's experience at the Sands Point Bath Club on Long Island, where he was struck over the eye by an unidentified guest.

When the doors were opened, police had to use strong-arm methods to prevent a pell-mell rush inside and the Senate committee, composed of Chairman Connally, Senators Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, and Thomas (Democrat), Utah, had difficulty maintaining order after the hearing started.

One of the main attractions was John G. Holland, the committee's own investigator, who has denounced the committee publicly at each session this week with shouted charges that it was seeking to "cover up rather than investigate."

Assails Committee.

And he did not disappoint them today. He interrupted a witness to ask the chairman if he could make a request. Before Connally could answer he opened a tirade against the committee. With his fists shaking and his arms flaying the air he shouted:

"If you are really in earnest in putting this evidence in the record,

War on Dollar Seen in London

Writer Says England and France United Against Roosevelt Plan.

London, Nov. 17 (Friday) (AP). The financial editor of the Herald said in an article today that Mortagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, and Clement Moret, governor of the Bank of France, were cooperating in a determined fight to defeat President Roosevelt's monetary plans.

The financial editor said the bank heads interpreted President Roosevelt's policy as a deliberate attempt to force France off the gold standard and create a dollar dictatorship as a prelude to establishing a new worldwide currency system and obtaining control of the international gold market.

He said he believed recent gold withdrawals from France were much greater than announced and that but for Bank of England support would have caused a drastic slump in the French exchange and possibly France's abandonment of gold.

The editor claimed to have information that the Bank of England in the last few days had bought hundreds of millions of francs to prevent the fall.

Election Menace Drives Tourists From Spain

Gibraltar, Nov. 16 (AP).—Fearing trouble in the Spanish elections scheduled Sunday, hundreds of British residents of Andalusian towns and tourists of all nationalities are flocking here.

Extra police and military reinforcements were arriving today from Algeciras, San Roque and Lalinea.

Two Confess Tossing Hart Alive in Bay

Slain Prior to Demands for $40,000 Ransom From Father.

San Jose, Calif., Nov. 16 (AP).—Two men who authorities said confessed they kidnaped and killed Brooke L. Hart, were guarded against possible mob violence tonight, while efforts were made to recover the body of the San Jose merchant's son from San Francisco Bay.

Jack Holmes, 28, and Thomas Harold Thurmond, 27, both members of respected San Jose families, who admitted they hurled Hart from a bridge a short time after abducting him, were held in a San Francisco jail.

Louis O'Neal, prominent attorney, announced the confessions on authority of J. N. Black, chief of police of San Jose.

Bay Dragged for Body.

Near the place on the San Mateo County Bridge, a few miles from here, where officers said Holmes and Thurmond admitted beating the 22-year-old victim with a brick, binding him and tossing him into the bay, boatmen dragged with hooks.

Authorities said chances of recovering the body were slim, pointing out that swift currents probably carried it away.

The search was pressed, however, after both State and Federal authorities declared that only recovery of the body was necessary to complete the case against Holmes and Thurmond, who will be tried under a new California law, which provides death or life imprisonment for kidnapers who cause bodily harm to their victim.

Every other detail of the alleged confession, officers said, checked with facts in the case, even to the discovery of Hart's wallet on the rail of an oil tanker, which had been tied up on the San Francisco waterfront.

Father Faints.

Alex J. Hart, the father, collapsed when told that his son had been killed. Max Blum, a personal friend, broke the news to him.

"Alex," said Blum, "your boy is dead."

The elder Hart attempted to speak but could not. Then he fainted.

Mrs. Hart, who was operated on not many weeks ago, was reported in a precarious condition at her home and under the care of physicians. The younger brother and sister of the slain youth also were prostrated.

Thurmond's confession follows in part:

"I, Harold Thurmond, voluntarily make this statement to R. E. Vetterli, Harold Anderson, of the United States Department of Justice and to Sheriff William J. Emig and Undersheriff Earle Hamilton that I have known Jack Holmes approximately one year; he recently approached me with a plan to kidnap Brooke Hart and hold him for ransom.

"Thursday, November 9, shortly before 6 o'clock, Holmes and I saw Brooke Hart come to a parking lot. Holmes and I had previously planned just how we would kidnap Hart.

"Holmes was to get in the car of Brooke Hart as it approached Market street and I was to follow in another car which belonged to Holmes. Brooke Hart obtained his car from the lot and drove out the driveway toward Market street.

Kidnaped in Own Car.

"Jack Holmes met the car at the curb and forced Hart to go away with him. According to directions, I followed the car, in Holmes' coach, which had been parked on Market street.

"As soon as I saw him pass me in Hart's car I proceeded to Milpitas and waited for them at the Spangler Garage. Shortly thereafter Holmes and Hart drove by and I followed the car about 7 miles from San Jose.

"When Holmes stopped they both got out and Holmes told Hart to get in the back of the car I was driving.

"We stopped half a mile from the bridge. Hart was ordered out of the car and Holmes hit him over the head with a brick, which I had

Explorer, Missing 7 Years, Reported Seen

Montevideo, Uruguay, Nov. 16 (U.P.). A possible clew to the fate of Col. P. H. Fawcett, British explorer, missing in the Brazilian wilds for seven years, was seen today in the assertion of Miguel Trucchi, Italian traveler, that he met Fawcett in the jungle.

Trucchi said Fawcett was a captive of an Indian tribe and that he refused to go away with Trucchi.

Oklahoma City, Nov. 16 (U.P.). Harry Irving Clarkson, 35, Tulsa singer, was injured fatally and Carlo Edwards, assistant conductor of the Metropolitan Opera Co., New York, suffered serious injuries when their automobile overturned 3 miles east of Edmond today.

Clarkson died soon after in an Oklahoma City hospital.

NRA Staff Promised 'New Deal'

Johnson Bows to Wage and Hour Demands of Workers.

General Sees Injustices and Blames Them on Rush in Office.

The Blue Eagle must fly over NRA's own offices, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson agreed last night.

With more than 100 of his employes signed up in Lodge No. 91, of the American Federation of Government Employes, prepared for a mass meeting tonight at which their demands for higher wages and shorter hours will be aired, the National Recovery Administrator issued a statement admitting the justice of their complaints.

Gen. Johnson, explaining his organization had been built up hurriedly, with inevitable injustices in the matter of hours and wages, promised to see that these are corrected.

Compliments Staff.

"Our people have stood the strain of a terrific rush and are entitled to have conditions made as pleasant and satisfactory as it is possible to make them," he said last night. "And that is what we intend to do."

The general's statement, while it did not specifically mention the NRA employes' union, was issued in response to queries as to what the Recovery administrator proposed to do about qualifying his own department for a Blue Eagle.

Apprised of Gen. Johnson's promise to adjust inequities and remedy injustices, Miss Margaret Stabler, secretary-treasurer of Lodge No. 91, said last night that while she was delighted with the news, the NRA union must go on.

Rally Set for Tonight.

"We had expected such cooperation from the Administrator," she said. "It's a great source of satisfaction to have him on our side.

"We feel, however, that our union has certain general objectives which make it most worth while, and we are going ahead with our mass meeting at the American Federation of Labor Building, tonight. William Green, president of the A. F. of L., and E. Claude Babcock, president of the A. F. G. E., will address the meeting.

"One of our primary objectives is cooperation with the other unions of Government employes who are seeking restoration of the 15 per cent wage cut. We feel we can be helpful in this and other matters."

Bargaining Believed Needless.

With not more than one-tenth of the NRA's employes signed up in the new union, many of the others last night expressed belief that collective bargaining with Gen. Johnson would be unnecessary. They voiced confidence that the administrator would effect the necessary salary and hour adjustments to satisfy every one and so avoid having to deal with the union's representatives.

Gen. Johnson's statement follows:

"There is justice in some cases for the complaint of some of the employes of the NRA concerning pay, hours, &c. This organization, as every one knows, had to be built up overnight, almost. In such a hurried grouping of people, summoned to a job that could not wait for perfect regimentation, there was a rather haphazard arrangement as to salaries and duties and all the rest of it.

Change "Inevitable."

"It was inevitable when we got around to it that there should be a classification to bring our people into line with the statutory Government scales and I was, of course, thoroughly in sympathy with this procedure."

"The classification had been completed in our establishment and

Langer to Modify Embargo on Wheat

North Dakota Ban May Be Lifted Today.

Bismarck, N. Dak., Nov. 16 (AP).—Modification of North Dakota's wheat embargo to permit shipment of durum wheat out of the State is expected tomorrow by Gov. William Langer, who tonight prepared a draft of his order.

Steps to modify the embargo will be taken because durum has reached a price to permit importation of Canadian durum despite a tariff of 42 cents a bushel.

Three Face Death In Marooned Boat

Rescue Ships Battle Ice to Save Youths.

Green Bay, Wis., Nov. 16 (U.P.).—A steam tug and several fishing boats battled through the ice of Green Bay tonight in an effort to rescue three youths marooned in a small boat.

The boat, a small cabin craft, was reported to be without heating facilities and it was feared the occupants might freeze.

In the boat were Walter Brunette, 20; his brother, Joseph, 21, and Elmer Phillips, 20.

$2,500,000,000 Goal Set for U. S. Budget

34 Per Cent Reduction in Ordinary Expenses, Aim of Lewis.

A budget limiting ordinary Federal expenses to $2,500,000,000 in the coming fiscal year is the goal set by Budget Director Lewis Douglas, the Associated Press reported last night.

This is a reduction of 34 per cent from the estimate for the fiscal year 1933-34, which was $3,775,884,870. For that year Congress actually appropriated $4,149,627,304.

It is a reduction from $3,942,754,614, the estimate for 1932-33, the last year of the Hoover Administration, for which Congress appropriated $3,995,026,535.

Cuts Up to President.

The new budget estimate includes approximately $135,000,000 to be available if President Roosevelt decides living costs have increased sufficiently to justify restoration of the 15 per cent Federal employe salary cut, the Associated Press said. Under the economy act passed in the special session, the President was empowered to restore the cut or any part therof should living costs necessitate it.

Estimates for the first complete annual budget Douglas has handled now are in the final stages of preparation for submission to the coming session of Congress.

Those for the first of the nine regular annual supply bills—the independent offices' measure, containing estimates for the Veterans Administration—are to be sent to the House Appropriations Committee by Douglas on November 27.

Others Follow Soon.

Estimates for the Navy, Justice, State, Commerce and Labor Departments are to follow soon thereafter to permit appropriation subcommittees to hold hearings in December and to whip bills into shape for House action in January.

The ordinary budget estimates include about $850,000,000 of anticipated Postoffice expenditures which are not expected by Postoffice Department officials to exceed postal revenues next year. Should this hoped-for offset occur, officials pointed out there would be no drain on the Treasury by this department.

The budget estimates prepared by

U. S. Indicts Oil Men on Code Charge

11-Hour Day, 6-Day Week Cited in New York; Test Heralded.

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—A Federal indictment on a charge of violating an NRA code—described by the prosecutor as the first of its kind—was returned by a Brooklyn grand jury today against the Hercules Gas Filling Stations, Inc., and the company's officers.

Six of the nine counts in the indictment are based on working hours allegedly maintained by the firm. The other three charge the company failed to post the gasoline price in the manner prescribed by the code.

David Lind, president, and Moe Levine, vice president, asserted they had not signed the code and maintained their business was outside the NRA's jurisdiction. They said they had engaged counsel to fight the case.

11-Hour Day Charged.

The indictment charges the company has been requiring employes to work 11 hours a day, six days a week, with 1 hour for lunch. The maximum under the code is 48 hours a week.

Louis R. Glavis, an investigator for the Interior Department, directed the gathering of evidence for the case, which the district attorney's office said would be rushed to trial. Conviction would make the defendants liable for a $500 fine on each of nine counts.

Lester Bachner, one of the company's attorneys, said:

"We claim that the Government had no right to indict our clients. The Government insists that it had the right. It is a question of law and it may 'bust' the whole NRA question wide open.

"We did not sign the code, but a

At Sea With the United States Fleet, Nov. 16 (AP).—In her baptism as a unit of the United States fleet, the world's greatest sky ship, the U. S. S. Macon, was destroyed theoretically in maneuvers off the California Coast.

The Macon, early in the maneuvers, found itself above the scouting force and promptly was put under theoretical gunfire of six light cruisers.

Nine Named As Lynchers In Maryland

Attorney General Calls for Arrests in Princes Anne Killing.

Baltimore, Nov. 16 (AP).—Maryland's attorney general, William Preston Lane, jr., tonight announced he had asked the arrest of nine persons whom witnesses charged with participation in the lynching of George Armwood, Negro, by a mob that stormed the Princess Anne Jail on October 18.

Lane said that from State policemen, who were swept aside by the mob, and from Baltimore detectives he had obtained "information identifying by name, addresses and occupation of nine persons who participated in the crime and described the part each took."

The attorney general added that he forwarded his information to State's Attorney John B. Robins, of Somerset County, by registered letter, advising they be brought befor a magistrate for hearing.

Robins Declines Comment.

Robins, at Crisfield, tonight said he had received the Attorney General's letter and had replied. Declining to make any comment, he referred all questions to the Attorney General.

The Somerset State's attorney said he had not sought or caused the arrest of anybody in the case. Sheriff Luther Daugherty, of Somerset County, said he knew nothing about the Lane information.

Lane said he would not make public the names of the nine men until Robins and Daugherty had had time to make the arrests. Asked why he had asked the arrest of the men and the preliminary hearing before a magistrate, rather than presenting the information to the

Jenny Dolly's Jewels Bring Fourth of Value

Paris, Nov. 16 (AP).—A million dollars' worth of jewelry belonging to Jenny Dolly brought only 4,448,600 francs (approximately one-fourth their estimated value) in a public auction today at the Hotel Drouot.

The two most noted pieces of Miss Dolly's famous collection were sold at very low figures. A 51-karat diamond ring went for 1,625,000 francs (currently about $107,000) and an emerald ring of the same size for 206,000 francs (about $14,000).

Embassy Active On Eve of Accord

Announcement Expected Prior to Departure of Roosevelt.

By Kendall Foss.

Recognition of the Soviet Union before the President leaves for Warm Springs this evening is virtualy certain.

The last of the "serious difficulties" mentioned in Mr. Roosevelt's letter to Mr. Kalinin apparently was smoothed away yesterday afternoon. There remain only the finishing touches upon the agreement announcing the establishment of normal relations and the end of 16 years of officially ignoring each other's existence.

Precisely what this announcement will contain remains a closely guarded secret. It is a safe assumption, however, that each country will be found to have safeguarded its real interests and that neither will have to fear unpleasant repercussions.

Tangible evidence that it is all over but the shouting was seen in the presence of three Army trucks backed up to the side door of the old imperial Russian Embassy on Sixteenth street late last night.

Embassy Furniture Moved.

Close-mouthed soldiers were moving heavy packing cases left untouched since Kerensky's man, Boris Bakhmeteff, closed up shop a few months after his government disappeared, nearly 16 years ago.

Soldiers and Metropolitan police cordoned off the area and insisted that would-be spectators keep moving. Silence and mystery enshrouded the proceedings.

It was understood, however, that State Department officials had requested an Army detail assigned to the task and specified they wanted the job done late at night and as quietly as possible.

Following several disclaimers by department officials of any knowledge of the proceedings, it was given out that cases containing documents were being transported to a more convenient place. The move was made with the full knowledge of Commissar Litvinoff, it was said, and the musty papers were taken to vacant rooms in temporary building No. 7, near Seventh and C streets northwest. The superior convenience of this new location was not explained.

Following recognition the Embassy building automatically falls to the Soviet government and thereafter enjoys diplomatic immunity.

The place has been boarded up with only an old Russian caretaker and his wife to keep the dust from gathering too thickly.

Trade Topic Indicated.

Commissar Litvinoff attended the White House reception following a dinner the President gave for his Cabinet last night. After a short general chat, President Roosevelt and Mr. Litvinoff retired to the study, presumably to complete their task.

In addition to the President, Secretary Woodin, Henry Morgenthau, jr., who is to become Acting Sec-

Greatest Solvent Found by Science

Manufacturing Problems Overcome by Discovery.

Eugene, Oreg., Nov. 16 (AP).—Discovery that acetamide has a wider range of solvent powers than any other substance is announced at the University of Oregon.

Solvents, although themselves uninteresting and usually smelly, are the base of most of chemistry's industrial marvels. The Oregon discovery means that acetamide probably can be used to manufacture many substances not possible to make economically—or even at all—at present.

Acetamide is no odoriferous exception. It is a white, crystalline substance, which melts to a liquid at about 175 degrees Fahrenheit. The discoverer of the solvent properties is Dr. O. F. Stafford.

Ban Against Hoarding Gold Up to Treasury, Court Rules

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—President Roosevelt's antigold-hoarding policy was upheld today by Federal Judge John M. Woolsey, but the jurist ruled that the Secretary of the Treasury, and not the President, should have issued the order of August 28 directing hoarders to return their gold.

Judge Woolsey gave his ruling in sustaining an indictment charging Frederick B. Campbell, lawyer-capitalist, with failure to report possession of 27 bars of gold valued at $200,574.

The court upheld Campbell's demurrer to one count of a superseding indictment charging him with failure to return the gold to the Federal Reserve Bank.

Sustaining the demurrer Judge Woolsey ruled that Congress had vested in the Secretary of the Treasury, and not in the President, the right to issue the order calling for return of gold.

United States Attorney George Z. Medalie, who presented the Campbell case to the grand jury, declared Judge Woolsey's ruling "is against the Government only on one point, "That the power to order surrender of gold and to make regulations as to its possession is vested in the Secretary of the Treasury by act of Congress and not in the President."

Two courses lay open to the Government, as pointed out at the Federal Building: It may appeal the technicality cited by Judge Woolsey; or the Treasury can issue a new order embodying the same provisions in the August proclamation.

In Washington, Attorney General Cummings expressed little concern over the technicality, saying the defect in the order could easily be rectified.

Mary McCormic Wallops Girl Who Tried to Sell Inside Story

Los Angeles, Nov. 16 (AP).—With Irish gusto, Mary McCormic, opera songbird, told today how and why she "socked" the woman biographer of the three "marrying Mdivanis" in a newspaper office last night—while reporters and editors stood aghast.

The other principal, and loser, in the encounter was Miss Grace Williams, who, during spare time from duties as a hotel club hostess, is writing up the lives of Princes Serge, David and Alexis Mdivani, of the Soviet province of Georgia.

Only last Tuesday Miss McCormic divorced Prince Serge and she was incensed on being advised last night that Miss Williams was in the newspaper office, trying to sell details of the divorce property settlement, theretofore secret.

The songstress caught a taxi, rushed to the office, confronted Miss Williams, brushed aside newspapermen, and "smacked" the biographer with a right to the jaw.

"I hit her only once, because she was too scared to hit back," related Miss McCormic, in negligee after a late rising today.

"If she had, I'd have knocked her out.

"They tried to shush me. 'If you've got to hit her, wait till you get outside Mary,' they told me. But I saw red. It was good. Here was Kid McCormic, squaring away in one corner of the ring. Battling Williams in another, as white as a sheet, and the city editor, a nice gentlemanly little man—trying to act as referee or something.

"I just took off my glove so it would feel better when I socked her, and let her have a right to the jaw."

Job Rise Slows; Shorter Hours' Fight Forecast

NRA Gains Cut Sharply; 30-Hour Week Urged for 10,890,000 Idle.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

On the basis of the Labor Department's employment and pay roll statistics for October, showing only fractional improvement after the rapid increases of the preceding six months, belief was growing in some quarters yesterday that a fight for tightening hour and wage provisions in NRA codes was impending.

While Secretary Perkins, announcing the monthly figures, noted many that reflected credit on the Administration's recovery program, industrial employment gained only one-tenth of 1 per cent between mid-September to the same period of October, and pay rolls moved up but six-tenths of 1 per cent. Thus, the upward curves of the big chart facing Miss Perkins' desk had begun to flatten out.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor and a member of NRA's Labor Advisory Board, reiterated his belief that an average 30-hour week will be necessary to absorb the 10,890,000 persons the Federation estimates are still out of work. Indications were that other union board members, strengthened by a slowing up in employment, would join him in attempting to lower the present NRA average of 40 hours.

Industry Opposes Cut in Hours.

Although few in the NRA have been outspoken on the prospect of further shortening of hours, the recent statement of Assistant Administrator A. D. Whiteside that, unless immediate improvement is noticed, codes would have to be revised, stood out. Mr. Whiteside, while speaking informally and giving only his own opinion, is one of the chief aids to Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson.

Generally speaking, the Labor Advisory Board has consistently sought to lower hours, and the more than 100 codes already signed represent a compromise of the conflicting interests of all advisory groups—labor, industrial and consumers. Opposed to the theory of spreading work and increasing pay rolls would be the industrial branch, which has contended that too great an increase would stifle business and defeat the whole purpose.

Miss Perkins did not consider the Labor Department's figures unduly significant, other than they showed no average loss of recovery gains and as illustrative of the effect of the NRA on certain industries, notably producers' goods. She would not speculate on the possibilities of November, but this is the time of the year when employment normally shows a decline.

The slowing up of the NRA, largely responsible for returning to work 750,000 in August and 700,000 in September among the industries surveyed, was obvious on the Bureau of Labor report of only an additional 85,000 in October. Altogether more than 2,800,000 have been employed over the seven months since March.

Since these figures cover industries normally employing only 20,000,000 of the 49,000,000 gainful workers, unemployment has been reduced by about 4,000,000, it is estimated. The generally accepted figure of 13,000,000 formerly unemployed is thus lowered to 9,000,000. About this latter number, so far not touched by the recovery campaign, may be waged the struggle to broaden the benefits of the NRA.

Attack on Three Fronts.

Attacking the problem from another front, President Roosevelt has put into operation his plan to give 4,000,000 sustaining work this winter, and the effects of the Public Works Administration are increasingly being felt. Contracts from the latter's $3,300,000,000 fund now total more than $500,000,000, it is estimated, and employment from this source is expected to show a rapid increase.

Unrest over the NRA developed at about the same time its effect was slowing down, the labor report shows, similar to the agricultural uprising that followed the halting of the summer's rapid increase in farm prices. Whether both employment figures and farm prices can be kept on an upward trend are the chief problems of the Administration, which it hopes to solve by both the NRA, conceded to be in front, public works and the slower A. A. A.

District Work Increases.

Using the year 1926 as an index, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported that employment for October stood at 74, and pay rolls at 53.6. The figures for September were 73.9 and 53, a marked increase over August's 71.6 and 52. Compared with last year's index for October, employment has increased 23.5 points, while pay rolls have gained 34.3, largely in the last seven months.

Oil Men Indicted On Code Charge

number of our competitors who did sign it proceeded to violate it in the same manner that is charged against us. In order to compete with them and keep our business going, we had to work our men the same number of hours they did.

"We refuse to be made the goat and so they have indicted us, not apparently for violation of the code but for refusing to sign the code, which does not bind our competitors who have signed it.

"We will appear before Federal Judge Galston in Brooklyn tomorrow morning and present our case. There is more to it than appears from the reading of the indictments."

Assistant United States Attorney Emanuel Bublich, in charge of the prosecution, said the district attorney's office had 12 other NRA violation cases which would be prosecuted soon.

Move to Fix Dollar Value Seen as Gold Price Halts

he did say that he would undertake, if he had his way, an extensive housing program to provide employment and get money circulating, letting prices take care of themselves.

Bulkley Sees President.

6—Senator Robert J. Bulkley of Ohio, of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, after talking with the President on monetary and gold policy, reported that the gold content of the dollar would be fixed "after the present period of experimentation," though he did not profess to say how long the experiment would go on. When it ends, he said, he expects the President to stabilize, but he could not estimate how soon this would be. The senator also reflected the President's opinion that commodity prices were moving up satisfactorily and that general conditions were improved.

Meanwhile, Mr. Morgenthau wound up his affairs as governor of the Farm Credit Administration, had his associate and deputy governor, Prof. William I. Myers, installed in his place and prepared to be sworn in today as Undersecretary of the Treasury replacing Dean G. Acheson, whose resignation signalized the inner Administration discord and dissent over the current inflationary experiments.

Dollar Still Dizzy.

The dollar continued its dizzy gyrations, buffeted by conflicting conceptions of traders and speculators as to its future value.

It closed in official trading in London at $5.52, its lowest point since the Civil War, though it rallied at the close. The halt in the daily domestic price boosting was construed as a sign of impending revaluation at about the present level.

Prof. George F. Warren, of Cornell, the President's chief adviser on the commodity dollar theory, former senior associate of Prof. Myers in Cornell's farm management courses, and instructor of Mr. Morgenthau, was said by some observers to be ordering a temporary halt for the purpose of observing the effects of what has been done to date.

There is no basic change, however, in the Administration policy toward the commodity or compensated dollar.

This breathing spell, for observational purposes, fits in with the reports of an impending order to halt further flight of American capital, with the apparent reassuring of Prof. Sprague, with Senator Bulkley's general understanding, with the postponement of the Franco-British purpose to take common council, and with the failure of the President's gold-price manipulation to raise the domestic gold price.

Three-Day Continuance.

This is the first time since the new policy was adopted that there has been a three-day continuance of the same domestic price. The price boosters have skipped a day twice, but not before have they let the same figure stand for more than 48 hours.

It also coincides with the rising tide of complaint from business, banking and all other sources which are confused by and hostile toward the gold manipulations. And it is well known that the Administration is uneasy over the sagging of the Government bond market.

That the Federal Reserve system has not been supporting Government bond market during the sagging of the last week was disclosed by Reserve figures yesterday showing that open market purchases by the Reserve banks had been only $2,000,000 for the week ended November 15.

In previous weeks purchases of Government bonds had run to $35,000,000, but have been slacked off gradually in recent weeks.

Cause for More Rumors.

This failure to support the bond market gave rise to more rumors of an Administration resort to United States notes, commonly denominated as greenbacks, or to a direct discounting of Treasury notes at Reserve banks, as a means of future Treasury financing.

However, the White House is determined to avoid the "greenbacking" charge, if possible, and the rumor assumes that the Treasury can not continue to raise funds readily in the usual way—something which the Administration does not admit.

Mr. Morgenthau drew attention on Thursday to the Treasury's cash balance of $1,400,000,000, out of which Administration officials say they could meet December 15 financing of $700,000,000.

Chairman Jesse Jones of the R. F. C. reported yesterday that R. F. C. buying of domestic newly minted gold amounted only to 6,582,000 ounces. He again kept secret all details about foreign gold buying, but he remarked that the foreign purchases were small and scarcely enough to "fill your teeth."

That the President is satisfied with the manipulations to date is implied on all sides. The White House has a chart, made public yesterday, recording a 10 per cent increase in some 17 basic commodities, chiefly agricultural.

The Labor Department's commodity price index reflected a slight increase of ½ of 1 per cent, but, nevertheless, an increase. That is what the White House is after.

While the commodity price gains are trifling compared with the dollar's depreciation in exchange, the Administration economists emphasize that there is an indeterminate lag between the two, but that they both follow the same general trend on the chart.

Hence the Administration is satisfied with the results so far, and the evidences of a halt yesterday signified anew the intention to avoid undermining the bond market or provoking foreign repercussions.

Satisfied With Results.

This does not imply an end of the policy, but does suggest that it has reached a stage at which devaluation is being seriously considered, preparatory to trying out the compensated dollar theory.

The Committee for the Nation, with which Prof. Warren has been closely identified, has been urging that the price of gold be advanced to $41.34, double the statutory rate. But a revaluation at that point would leave the President's price manipulators no upward latitude, since that represents the maximum leeway allowed the President under the Thomas amendment.

Instead, if the revaluation is at about the level now set of $33.56, the Administration may raise or lower this price, if and when it embarks on a real test of the "rubber dollar," as its foes term it.

That Mr. Morgenthau, who becomes the real head of the Treasury, though nominally only Acting Secretary as long as Secretary Woodin remains on leave, is wholeheartedly behind the commodity or compensated dollar, is not to be doubted, from his own statements and from the editorial expressions of the American Agriculturalist, a farm paper in which he is interested. That paper has been constantly urging the "compensated dollar" as the "best plan for reflation."

Britain, France Seek New Life In Arms Meet

Italy May Join in Move to Lessen German Tension.

Geneva, Nov. 16 (AP).—Representatives of France and Great Britain and, perhaps Italy, will meet here Saturday in an attempt to revitalize the Disarmament Conference.

The announcement was made today that Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, and Foreign Minister Joseph Paul-Boncour, of France, are being sent here.

Their first problem, observers said, would involve political conversations regarding the position of Germany, which withdrew last month from the conference and the League of Nations.

The attitude of the German government was still described as "wait and see."

It was believed in some circles that an encouragement to the negotiations might lie in a lessening of tension between France and Germany regarding other matters, including the Saar Basin territory.

France has lately advanced the arms possibilities by distributing a plan for the control of armaments whereby mobile bodies would be authorized to conduct investigations into the armaments of any country, and to inspect the records of arms factories at least once a year, always without advance notice.

Envoy Welles Plans To Fly to Miami

Will Proceed to Georgia to See President.

Havana, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—United States Ambassador Sumner Welles may not return directly to his post in Havana following his conference with President Roosevelt Sunday, it was intimated tonight.

Ambassador and Mrs. Welles plan to proceed to the United States either tomorrow or Saturday, presumably flying to Miami, Fla., and then hurrying on to Warm Springs, Ga., to meet Mr. Roosevelt.

Mrs. Welles plans to continue on to Washington, to remain indefinitely, it was understood. Ambassador Welles expects to report to the President and then, instead of returning at once to Havana, proceed to Washington to confer at the Department of State "a day or two."

Farm Picket Wounded; 13 Held After Riot

Appleton, Wis., Nov. 16 (AP).—One picket was wounded and 13 were arrested as new farm strike outbreaks flared in Outgamie County today.

Marshal Peterson, of Clintonville, was shot in the foot by a deputy when the band of pickets pushed forward despite tear gas and besieged a creamery at Maple Creek, near New London.

Charles Stillman Dies in New York

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Charles Stillman, 74, cotton broker and treasurer of the Golden Rule Foundation, died last night at his home of heart disease.

He was a brother of the late James Stillman, chairman of the board of the National City Bank, when he died in 1918.

why don't you let some one examine the witness who understands the evidence to be produced and let Senator Logan and you other senators cross-examine? You are not seriously trying to put evidence in the record."

He continued to shout until his remarks were drowned in yells and cheers of the spectators.

Threatens to Move.

Connally threatened to move the hearing to some other city in Louisiana if the spectators did not conduct themselves with "order and respect."

Senator Long, whose organization supported Senator Overton, has not been seen at the hearing since the second day, when he testified.

After the uproar at the opening of today's session the investigation went forward orderly, with witnesses testifying to charges of stuffing ballot boxes, passing of money, intimidation of Broussard representatives, false ballot counts by the commissioners at the polls, jailings, and threats of beatings.

Groves in U. S. Tax Post Hints Rise in Revenue

Treasury's New Advisor Plugged Income Gaps in Wisconsin.

Appointment yesterday of Prof. Harold M. Groves, progressive University of Wisconsin economist, as special tax adviser to the Treasury Department, lends weight to the announcement that the House Ways and Means Subcommittee is preparing tax legislation designed to increase by $300,000,000 to $400,000,000 a year the Federal income tax revenue.

Groves, a follower of the John R. Commons school of economics, has been instrumental in plugging holes in the Wisconsin State income tax law whereby large corporations evade taxes by charging off capital gains and losses.

It is believed that when he arrives in Washington December 1 he will start to work immediately on research which might stop such holes in the Federal income tax law as have been revealed in the Senate banking investigation.

Members of the House subcommittee probably will go into consultation with him immediately to fortify their embryo plans to make Federal revenue savings in places where the Senate committee has revealed evasions.

Wisconsin has the highest income rate of any State in the country. Due to Groves' activity in the Wisconsin Legislature, the sliding scale provides particularly high rates in the higher brackets of incomes.

In addition to having the highest normal rate, the figure is doubled by a surtax for relief.

In conformity with his belief in social legislation, Groves was instrumental in keeping the Wisconsin inheritance tax rates at a high peak, as high as any other State.

Observers see in the appointment of the Wisconsin Progressive an indication of a Federal move toward higher income tax for further emergency relief programs.

Groves sponsored the Wisconsin unemployment insurance law, which was the first State law to be passed.

A stanch supporter of former Gov. Philip La Follette, Groves was appointed State tax commissioner, but was not reappointed this year. Present Gov. Schmedeman has been strongly criticized for his failure to make the reappointment.

Stratosphere Trip Scheduled Today

Settle Ready to Take Off From Akron.

Akron, Ohio, Nov. 16 (AP).—In a tiny gondola loaded with supplies ranging from bananas to cosmic ray meters and female fruit flies, Lieut. Comdr. T. G. W. Settle plans to make another attempt to reach the stratosphere tomorrow if weather conditions remain favorable.

The naval flyer, whose previous attempt failed last summer at Chicago when the gas valve on his balloon stuck at an altitude of 5,000 feet, will have the unverified altitude record of 11.8 miles, which two Russians claimed in September, to shoot at if he so chooses. Recently, however, he said he did not intend to try for the record.

Japan's 'Big Navy' Program Boosted

Battleship to Be Rebuilt; Submarine Launched.

Tokyo, Nov. 16 (AP).—Japan's "big navy" program had gained impetus tonight after withdrawal of the navy's most formidable battleship from active service for extensive modernization, and the launching of a 7,500-ton submarine depot ship.

The Taigei, launched today, is an unimportant ship compared with the Mutsu, which was ordered modernized.

The navy, however, seized the launching as an occasion for a spectacular festival to stress the value of its submarine craft and to emphasize its demands for record appropriations next year.

Cabinet Halts Title Hunting in Germany

Berlin, Nov. 16 (AP).—The cabinet took steps today to end title-hunting on the preserves of the German nobility.

A new law adopted by the cabinet declares null and void any marriage concluded after November 9 that involved the exchange of a title for a certain monetary consideration.

J. P. Morgan Calls At White House

written about currency stabilization. The President invited Gov. Norman to tea at Hyde Park, and when the latter arrived he found the Roosevelt drawing room filled with members of the family and neighbors of his host.

But aside from the efforts of the White House to minimize the importance of the Morgan visit, it was regarded elsewhere as significant that Mr. Morgan wished to talk with President Roosevelt, even though that desire was not fulfilled. At all events, the visit created excitement and speculation as news of it spread in official circles.

It was regarded as likely that America's premier financier might have wished to discuss with the President his gold purchase policy and its possible effect on the currency systems of Great Britain and France. The House of Morgan maintains branch houses in both those countries, and during the World War acted as their American bankers. Mr. Morgan also might be concerned, it was held possible, about the condition of the United States Government bond market.

Taylor's Presence Cited.

The presence of Mr. Taylor at the meeting inspired the thought that perhaps Mr. Morgan desired to discuss with the President prospective sales of steel products to Russia. The President is now negotiating Russian recognition with Maxim Litvinoff, the Soviet commissar for foreign affairs. There has been some suggestions that Russia would buy large volumes of steel rails and other iron products on the completion of recognition, thus stimulating the capital industries.

Mr. Morgan until about two years ago was chairman of the board of the United States Steel Corporation. The Senate Banking and Currency Committee in its investigation of the Morgan banking house last spring revealed that Mr. Morgan was one of the largest stockholders in the steel corporation.

Another subject on which Mr. Morgan might wish to confer with the President would be the relationship between the steel industry and the NRA. Due to labor troubles in the so-called "captive mines," this subject has brought Mr. Taylor frequently to the White House in recent weeks.

April Statement Recalled.

The belief prevailed, however, that Mr. Morgan at this time would probably be more interested in the international aspects of the gold-purchase policy than any other question. It was recalled that when the United States abandoned the gold standard last April Mr. Morgan issued one of the few formal statements he has ever given.

"I welcome the reported action of the President and the Secretary of the Treasury in placing an embargo on gold exports," he said on that occasion.

"It has become evident that the efforts to maintain the exchange value of the dollar at a premium as against depreciated foreign currencies was having a deflationary effect upon already severely deflated American prices and wages and employment.

"It seems to me clear that the way out of the depression is to combat and overcome the deflationary forces. Therefore, I regard the action now taken as being the best possible course under the existing circumstances."

Mr. Morgan has been silent regarding the Roosevelt gold-purchase policy.

Other "Social" Visits.

With recurring frequency lately the White House has been describing the visit of prominent persons with the President as "purely social." Earlier this week this label was put on a call of former Gov. Alfred E. Smith and John J. Raskob, former Democratic National chairman. Later Bernard M. Baruch, New York financier, had dinner and spent the night at the White House. This also was termed "purely social."

But whether the Morgan visit had political significance or was "purely social" it was regarded as an unusual and interesting event. Apparent fear of popular disapproval has deterred most occupants of the White House from having any relations with the head of the House of Morgan.

Former Presidents Woodrow Wilson, Warren G. Harding, Calvin Coolidge and Herbert Hoover never felt the necessity for summoning the present Mr. Morgan to the White House, and if he had desired to make such a visit, they must have refused because there is no record that he has been there before.

Grover Cleveland during the panic of 1893 summoned the father of the present Morgan, also J. P. Morgan, to a conference to discuss steps for protecting the Federal Government's credit. Theodore Roosevelt when President also summoned the elder Morgan to settle a controversy over coal mining properties which arose in those trust-busting days. But these are the only occasions remembered last night when a Morgan has entered the White House.

Myers Named As Successor Of Morgenthau

Deputy Governor Chosen Head of Farm Credit Administration.

Another pupil of Prof. George F. Warren, sponsor of the Administration's gold purchase policy, achieved a post of prominence in the Roosevelt recovery program yesterday when Dr. William I. Myers was named governor of the Farm Credit Administration to succeed Henry Morgenthau, jr. He will take the oath of office today.

Mr. Morgenthau, who also studied under Prof. Warren at Cornell, also will take the oath of office as the Undersecretary of the Treasury this morning. Beginning next week, Mr. Morgenthau will indefinitely serve as Acting Secretary of the Treasury.

In taking over the direction of the Farm Credit Administration, Dr. Myers will need no guidance. Since this administration was set up last May, Dr. Myers has been deputy governor and the right-hand man of Mr. Morgenthau. He first came to Washington last March to assist in drafting the $2,000,000,000 farm credit legislation.

The new chief of farm credit will not be 42 years old until next month. Prior to his association with the Roosevelt Administration he was professor of farm finance at Cornell University where he received both degrees of bachelor of science and doctorate of philosophy. It was at Cornell that he studied under Prof. Warren.

Dr. Myers was an instructor in farm finance at Cornell from 1914 to 1918, when he was studying for his doctorate degree. In 1918 he became assistant professor of farm finance and two years later was promoted to a full professorship. When President Roosevelt became Governor of New York he was one of the group which gave advice regarding the State administration and which later became known as the "brain trust."

He owns a poultry farm near Ithaca, N. Y., and long has been interested in promoting cooperative agricultural marketing.

The Farm Credit Administration has jurisdiction over the Federal Land Banks, the Joint Stock Land Banks and the Federal Intermediate Credit Banks. Since June it has been engaged primarily in providing funds for the refinancing of farm mortgages threatened with foreclosure proceedings.

City Told to Rule On Ford Itself

Richberg Puts Boycott Row Up to Individual.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 16 (AP). Donald R. Richberg, general counsel of the NRA, told the Connecticut Manufacturers Association today that whether a municipality should purchase Ford automobiles is "wholly a matter of individual policy."

During a question and answer period which concluded his speech, Richberg was asked:

"Will the city of New Haven be living within the spirit of the NRA if it purchases Ford cars for municipal use?"

Richberg replied:

"I don't think I want to undertake to give advice to a municipality regarding exercise of discretion under the law. There is nothing in the recovery act that provides any basis for selecting between those who have complied with codes applying to their industries and those who have not. It is wholly a matter of individual policy."

Leisure Under NRA Held Social Problem

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Describing increased leisure to workers under the industrial recovery program as one of the social problems confronting the country, a local NRA committee set about today to find solutions.

"Witnesses" at the first hearing included Newton D. Baker, former Secretary of War, and President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University.

Trend to State Socialism Seen In "New Deal"

Nicholas Roosevelt Asserts It's Fruit of Voters' Negligence.

[This is the sixth of 10 articles written by Mr. Roosevelt after a month's tour through the Middle Western agricultural States.]

By Nicholas Roosevelt.

(Former Minister to Hungary, outstanding economics writer and cousin of President Theodore Roosevelt.)

Even though President Roosevelt's political and social philosophy has been somewhat elusive, due, perhaps, to his genial interest in all manner of men and causes, a distinct trend is clearly discernible in the ideas of his advisers. This trend is toward state Socialism. Call it planned economy, if you prefer, or a social regimentation, or any other term that more satisfactorily expresses the concept that the state has not only the right but the duty to interfere in the economic and social life of the individual in such a way as to direct his efforts toward a corporate goal in place of the old individualism and "laissez faire" policy.

In fairness to the New Dealers it must be said their policy is a natural reward for our former indifference to political and economic matters. We damned our politicians and high taxes. But except for voting on election day (if it happened to be convenient) we left politics to our politicians and journalists and economics to our bankers—and a few professors. When any of these gentlemen sought to render an accounting to us we paid no heed. We neglected editors and politicians alike, and while we tolerated the professors—unless they spoke too long—we first deified our bankers and then villified them.

Taxes Piled Up.

In the process the easiest way was to let Uncle Sam do it. In other words, if we needed something—which did not interfere with our own business occupation—we turned to the state for help. We piled up taxes and demanded more and more service.

Then came the crash. In the resulting disillusion and confusion we called on Washington to help out. Even Mr. Hoover, old-fashioned individualist, heeded this call and sought by Government intervention to check the depression. As the crisis became worse the demand for Government intervention increased—the Government should take over the banks; it should support the unemployed; it should regulate production; it should raise prices.

The New Dealers have taken these demands seriously. And what is the result? The Government is reaching its long arm down into the economic affairs of the simplest citizen. Not only is it telling him how long he may work, but it threatens him with some sort of vague penalty if he buys anything from some one who works longer than the Government believes is wise for him. It tells him how many acres of wheat he may plant, if he happens to be a wheat farmer. It tells him that he can not put in new spindles of he is a cotton manufacturer. It forbids him to keep gold in his safe deposit box if he is a man of thrift.

All Up to State.

Back of all this is the avowed interest of the state as a whole. And back of the state as a whole is the supposed interest of the people as a whole. The assumption is that "something ought to be done" about our present economic difficulties, and that as private initiative has failed the state ought to step in and regulate things. If we have overproduction the state should limit production. If we have maldistribution, the state should organize and operate distribution. Only in this way can a proper balance be restored and only so will we pull out of our depression and henceforth have a more equitable distribution of wealth.

According to a member of the "brain trust" who is one of the avowed authors of the New Deal, the alternative to the present trend is complete control of all activities by the State, with everyone working for Uncle Sam and drawing pay in the form of red tickets entitling him to such goods as he may be able to get (note well—not to the goods he may require).

Sanity Returning.

Such a proposition is too extreme even for the most credulous. Fortunately, there are already signs that a return to sanity is in progress. In Nebraska and Kansas many a farmer, small merchant and business man said to me "We'd be all right if only the Government would let us alone. We've pulled out of bad times before, and we'll do it again. But we won't do it if the Government keeps trying to regulate every detail of our lives."

The truth is, of course, that no governmental organization, however efficient, and no "brain trust," however brainy, can organize and regiment the entire Nation, or work out plans which will apply effectively to 120,000,000 people. State socialism is hard enough to apply in a small community. In a large country like ours, with our vastly different regional problems and our highly complicated economic, governmental and social structure, it is impossible to place in the hands of any centralized power the direction and supervision of so extensive and varied activities. Economic planning is conceivable—provided the Nation produces great brains coupled with wide experience. But to enforce any economic plan is a different matter—as the New Dealers are discovering to their surprise.

Old System Still Here.

To advocate a return to the old policy of letting nature take its course seems, in these days, like coming out for Jim Watson for President. But in our interest in the experiments of the New Deal we are losing sight of the good that existed—and still continues to exist—in the old American system. In the field of Government the mere fact that we have 48 States has proved a boon. It has facilitated administration and made it possible to carry on experiments without endangering the entire National structure. In economic fields, the principle of Government regulation rather than Government control and operation was being well worked out. The Government checked abuses without attempting to regiment operation. Many abuses remained—and still remain—to be checked. But with our new system we are creating new abuses, and some of these strike at the very foundations of the American system. The new theory is that the individual exists for the state. The theory was that the state existed for the individual. Before going further along the new path we would do well to pause and reexamine the principles on which this Nation was founded and built up. It should, at least, help to restore our perspective.

Editor's note—In his next article Mr. Roosevelt will discuss Hamiltonian Democrats and Jeffersonian Republicans.

Morgenthau Backs New Dollar

New Treasury Chief's Farm Paper Is Crusader for "Commodity" Currency; He Is Former Pupil of Prof. Warren, Author of "Prices."

That the commodity or compensated dollar, as well as symmetalism, as advocated by Prof. George F. Warren, President Roosevelt's chief monetary adviser, is indorsed by Henry Morgenthau, jr., now in command of the Treasury, is evident from editorials in the American Agriculturist, a farm paper of which Mr. Morgenthau became owner and publisher in 1926.

Ever since Mr. Morgenthau, former pupil of Prof. Warren at Cornell, entered the Administration, his paper has crusaded for the commodity dollar under a reduced gold content.

"There is not enough money to back the new currency on the same old basis," the paper said on March 18. "One way to get more currency into circulation is to devalue the dollar by not putting so much gold in it."

On April 15 the paper assailed the "dishonest dollar," and again called for revaluation. Later, in advocacy of symmetalism, the paper said: "However, it is possible to put both gold and silver back of our currency, limiting the amount of silver to be used for such purpose. Under proper control, two metals back of the dollar are better than one, because there would be less fluctuation." It added: "In our opinion, the best plan for reflation which would last is the compensated dollar."

Explanation Given in Book.

Prof. Warren's explanation of the compensated dollar as set forth in his book, "Prices," written in collaboration with Prof. F. A. Pearson, of Cornell, relates:

"Symmetalism would increase stability by using two or more metals. The compensated dollar is a proposal to establish a scientific measure of value. This proposal has been developed in great detail by Irving Fisher. He proposes that the gold dollar shall cease to be a constant weight of gold with a variable purchasing power and shall become a variable weight of gold with a purchasing power as nearly constant as possible. This is sometimes called a rubber dollar by persons who do not understand it. The dollar has to be rubber as to either weight or value. It can not have both its weight and its value fixed. This proposal lets the weight rather than the value vary. * * *

Would Not Coin Gold.

"With such a system there would no longer be any coinage of gold. The Government's gold supply would be kept in gold bars. The actual circulation would be the same as at present, i. e., paper dollars and small coins. All the currency would be exchangeable for gold on demand * * * but the amount of gold that a dollar would exchange for would vary with the price level. * * *"

After explaining how the gold content would be increased or diminished to keep the dollar's purchasing power relatively fixed, as measured by commodity prices, Prof. Warren continued:

"This is an all-commodity dollar rather than a one commodity dollar. This would make the dollar have the same value at all times. It would be independent of business cycles."

Sees Savings Assured.

His book goes on: "A country could adopt a compensated dollar without waiting for international agreements of any kind. There is much to be said for an international currency, but there is also much to be said for a currency that will not be distorted every time some country decides to dump gold or to hoard it. With the compensated dollar, an inflow of gold would not cause inflation. It would make gold cheap, just an inflow of coffee would make coffee cheap. An outflow of gold would raise the price of gold and make that country a good place in which to buy commodities. It would not cause a price collapse, unemployment or bankruptcy."

Prof. Warren holds that the compensated dollar would make savings assured, as the dollar would always buy the same amount of commodities. In rebutting objections to it, his book concedes that it "would not completely eliminate business cycles," but holds that they would "be cycles and not precipices."

Check on Booms Seen.

Such a variable gold dollar, says the book, would check booms and depressions."

"Another objection," it cites, "to this means of stabilization is that international exchange would be affected. This effect would be smaller than the uncertainties in the exchange which have always existed when a country on a gold basis is trading with some other country on a silver basis, and it would be trivial in comparison with the uncertainties between gold-using countries and countries that suspended gold payments from 1914 to 1932."

He proposes that the commodity price index prepared by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, of the Department of Commerce, be used by officials in determining from time to time what gold weight to assign to the dollar.

That President Roosevelt was tending toward some such commodity dollar and toward bimetallism has been evident since his message to the London economic conference. He at that time proposed that if and when countries return to a modified gold standard they should optionally use silver as well as gold as a metallic base for currency.

Spider Convinces Doctor of Poison

"Black Widow" Bite Brings Two Days of Agony.

University, Ala., Nov. 16 (AP). Dr. Alan W. Blair, of the University of Alabama, today had solved a problem which has puzzled arachnologists for years and one of the things they had been unable to determine was whether the "black widow" spider was poisonous.

Dr. Blair allowed one of the insects to bite his little finger. He was seized with violent cramps, taken to a hospital where he declined narcotics until the reactions had been registered.

After the symptoms had been thoroughly charted the professor spent two days in intense pain despite frequent opiates.

Today he was back home, pale and worn and as he put it, "thoroughly convinced."

France's New Cabinet Slated For Downfall

Sarraut Ministry Faces "Certain" Defeat on Budget Slashes.

Paris, Nov. 16 (AP).—Premier Albert Sarraut's cabinet, after 20 days of life, faced what a high official called "certain overthrow" tonight on budget-balancing proposals.

Two previous ministers have fallen on measures publicly described as imperatively needed to save the French franc and France's gold.

The cabinet offered the chamber of deputies the first of two disguised pay cut and economy measures like those that defeated the governments of Joseph Paul-Boncour and Edouard Daladier and the decision of the finance committee to consider the bill—after planning earlier to reject it—postponed an imminent crisis.

Deputies said, however, that the cabinet situation was "hopeless."

The bill presented today provides for reductions of 3,008,000,000 francs (about $200,000,000) from the budget, the expenses of which approximate 50,500,000,000 francs (about $3,350,000,000). These reductions included a 40,000,000-franc added pension assessment against government workers, who recently have threatened reprisals if it is adopted.

New York, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—William K. Vanderbilt 3d, killed yesterday in an automobile accident in South Carolina, will be buried beside his ancestors tomorrow in a cemetery on Staten Island, where the Vanderbilts once had vast estates.

The body of the wealthy youth arrived in New York from the South late today and was taken to the home of his mother, Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt. Funeral services are scheduled for Saturday morning in St. Thomas' Episcopal Church.

grand jury, which the circut judges had promised to call at his request, Lane replied:

"A magistrate's hearing is a public matter. A grand jury investigation is not."

Murder, He Says.

Asked if he believed the nine men should be charged with murder, Lane pointed to his earlier statement, which said:

"To kill by lynching is to commit murder. The leading of the crowd to the jail, the assault upon it and any effort to break into it, or inciting the mob to do so, and the taking of the Negro out of the jail are all part of the same crime."

When Gov. Ritchie was asked to comment upon Lane's announcement, he said:

"I have nothing to add. Mr. Lane's statement puts the matter squarely up to the Somerset authorities. He has done an excellent piece of work."

Cold Wave Maroons 50 Ontario Hunters

Fruitless attempts have been made to cut through the ice with motorboats where the crust was too thin to bear human weight and too thick to permit small boats to pass.

Soviet Recognition Held Certain Today

retary of the Treasury; Undersecretary Phillips of the State Department, and William C. Bullitt, special assistant to Secretary Hull, participated in the discussions, according to the Associated Press.

The presence of Woodin and Morgenthau indicated that trade relations between the two countries figured at the meeting.

A basis will have been found from which both nations can proceed to realize the advatages to follow recognition. There are large trade possibilities and political implications of imponderable significance.

Chief actors in the highly dramatic, though extremely secretive, negotiations of the last nine days are real statesmen, and it has always been better than an even bet that the outcome of the talks would be successful.

Benefits Understood.

Each man knew before negotiations began that there were benefits to be derived from success, and each knew far-reaching understandings were necessary before success could be proclaimed.

The task was one of finding common ground which would insure the unhampered gathering of the fruits, safeguard interests left over from the past, and embarrass neither party in the process.

Moscow probably will not be forced to make impossible concessions, and yet President Roosevelt will not have taken any "wooden nickels." When the smoke clears away, the President will, in all likelihood, be found standing just about where he was when he sent his letter to M. Kalinin.

Preparatory to stimulating Soviet trade, Assistant Secretary of State Harry F. Payer resigned his office yesterday to take up work as special counsel in export matters with the R. F. C. It is intended that he concentrate on Russian business, a field he has long been interested in.

Payer was identified with the report of the Case School in Cleveland on trade possibilities. It is believed he entered the State Department in anticipation of work of this nature.

Debts, Claims Involved.

Subjects likely to be disposed of in the recognition agreement include the Kerensky debt, the smaller Tsarist debt, claims and the attendent subject of counterclaims. Propaganda will no doubt have received attention and the religious issue will get whatever discussion is considered necessary where grounds for a real disagreement never existed.

It is more than likely, however, that a large part of the attention of negotiators has been devoted to the future rather than the past.

And it is a good guess that all of these things will be found to have been handled not as conditions of recognition, anathema to Moscow, but as mehods to be pursued in establishing normal recognition.

There is a comforting technical difference there, though not a damaging one in reality.

Freighter Sinks In St. Lawrence

Coteau, Que., Nov. 16 (AP).—The freighter Scotsman, which for years plied on the Ottawa-Montreal run, sank today near here in the St. Lawrence River.

The crew of 15 saved themselves by jumping into a lifeboat.

Steaming from Montreal yesterday the freighter bucked ice all the way. A mile west of the dock in Coteau Lake she was listing badly. Water was discovered pouring in and Capt. Raoul Lalonde ordered the boat headed for shore. Before she could be beached the crew were forced into the lifeboat.

School Clothing Needs Surveyed

Another poll of schools to determine how many children are absent because of lack of clothing will be started in the next few days, Supt. Frank W. Ballou said yesterday.

The superintendent will confer with Miss Fay Bentley, director of school attendance and work permits, regarding the census, which will cover a week. The work was requested by Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, vice president of the Board of Education.

Flow of Bank Loans to Wall Street Traced

Data Sought by Senators on Stock Buying Prior to 1929 Crash.

The flow of bank loans into frenzied Wall Street activity leading up to the 1929 crash was traced yesterday by the Senate Banking Committee in questionnaires sent to 40 banks, under mandate of supena.

As the committee peered closer into the complicated General Theaters Equipment financing, representing millions in "write-ups" from companies acquired, Counsel Ferdinand Pecora announced extension of the committee's inquiry to bank loans for stock purchases.

Fox May Be Called.

Developments yesterday were:

Pecora said he may call William Fox, once powerful moving picture operator, to explain what Pecora called "crazy quilt" financing involving companies in which Fox formerly was interested.

A warning to Harley L. Clarke, president of General Theaters Equipment Corporation, now in receivership, that perjury action might be brought if further conflict is found in his testimony.

A total "mark up" of $38,285,000 in stock of the International Projector Corporation, the National Theater Supply Co., the McCauley Manufacturing Co., the Strong Electric Co., the Ashcraft Automatic Arc Co. and the Hall & Connolly Co., when these six concerns were acquired by Greneral Theaters Corporation in July, 1929.

Acquisition by Clarke of Mitchell Camera Co. assets for $1,475,000, and their sale to the Grandeur Corporation for $3,100,000, in a deal involving a $2,000,000 payment to William Fox. General Theaters Equipment subsequently paid $2,000,000 for a half interest in Grandeur, makers of a revolutionary movie camera, Clarke testified.

Loans to Be Traced.

Pecora explained the bank questionnaires are being sent to determine just how much money was loaned for stock market purchases, as opposed to money loaned for commercial credit.

He said subpenas were issued to protect banks, hesitating to divulge confidential loan data from criticism by depositors. Information elicited will tie into data compiled from stock market questionnaires now being filled out by brokers, Pecora said.

The $38,285,000 "write up" charged by Pecora in some of the properties acquired by General Theaters included a $26,000,000 mark up in stock of International Projector, $10,737,000 in stock of National Theater Supply and $1,273,000 in stock of four so-called "lamp companies," McCauley Manufacturing Co., Strong Electric Co., Ashcraft Automatic Co. and Hall & Connolly Co.

Clarke told how he exchanged 5,000 shares of Theaters Equipment Acceptance Corporation, for which he paid $50,000, for 25,000 shares of General Theaters, valued at $500,000, a "paper profit" of $450,000.

Books Reveal Insull Millions In Midland Co.

Efforts to Protect Prior Investments Is Told by Federal Examiner.

Evidence that Insull utility groups poured millions of dollars into the sinking Midland United Co. in an effort to protect prior investments in that company was given the Federal Trade Commission yesterday in its examination of the financial structure of the Midland concern.

The efforts were to little avail, A. J. Hughes, commission examiner who investigated the Midland books, reported.

Revaluations concerning the main Insull utility firm, the Middle West Utility Co., are due to be laid before the commission today. A revised balance sheet for the company, computed by Mr. Hughes, as of December 31, 1932, is to be presented.

Other Groups Involved.

Thousands of shares of Midland United stock were purchased by other Insull groups, Mr. Hughes reported. These were the Middle West Utilities Co., the Commonwealth Edison Co., the Peoples Gas Light & Coke Co. and the Public Service Co. of Northern Illinois.

"Sale of stock to these firms did not indicate that they thought the price was a fair one, but rather indicated the necessity for these firms to contribute additional capital to the Midland United Co. to protect prior investmets in that company," Mr. Hughes told the hearing.

Further evidence of individuals obtaining corporation funds without reasonable securities being posted was given the hearing as Mr. Hughes submitted the second volume of a bulky report to the commission. He read into the record a letter written the Midland United directors by a firm of examiners, suggesting that the directors examine the legality of "advances" of $90,000, which the books showed had been made to three individuals.

The directors voted to make the suggested examination.

'29 Bank Credit Spree Assailed As Crash Cause

Inflation Then Put Public 250 Billions in Debt, Asserts Thomas.

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Senator Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, declared tonight that "in peace time, with no emergency save the greed for gain, the only real dangerous, destructive and inexcusable inflation this country has experienced was the bankers credit inflation responsible for and terminating in the 1929 crash."

With the financial crash four years ago, the senator said, there was less than five billion dollars of money in circulation, although banks showed deposits of approximately 60 billions.

Puts Debts at 250 Billions.

"These deposits—imaginary or credit monies—were presumed to be convertible into currency, silver or gold upon demand," the leader of the congressional inflation bloc said, "and in addition to the bank deposits, we had some 200 billions of dollars in listed bonds and stocks presumed to be as liquid and as easily converted into money as the bank deposits themselves."

Linking the debt burden of the Nation today directly with this credit inflation prior to October, 1929, Senator Thomas said it is estimated that all the people have massed debts in the sum of approximately $250,000,000,000.

Fears Repudiation.

"At the present," he continued, "instead of these debts being paid, much of the interest is being postponed and the debts themselves extended, which means that the debts are being compounded."

It is difficult, Thomas asserted, for any one to reach the conclusion that this debt burden can be met with the present high-priced dollars, and "hence, the only conclusion that can be reached is that either these debts must be repudiated or that the dollar must be substantially cheapened so that the people can procure such dollars in order to meet their debts."

U. S. Budget Set At $2,500,000,000

the bureau do not include figures for extraordinary expenditures or public works and relief purposes, nor for the public debt sinking fund and interest requirements, which aggregate $1,159,000,000 for the current year.

From high official sources, the Associated Press said it learned the Administration has not definitely decided whether it will ask for additional public works-employment funds, but it was generally conceded that more relief funds would be requested of Congress.

Division of Opinion.

This was attributed in official sources to a division of opinion among advisers of the President over whether it would be necessary to supplement the $3,300,000,000 public works fund, most of which has been allocated.

The Government is faced with refinancing a large portion of the public debt within the next few years, and the Treasury already shows a $888,000,000 deficit between ordinary receipts and expenditures for this year.

To facilitate the refinancing some Government officials indicated they regarded it as imperative that much of the economy program begun by President Roosevelt last spring be continued by Congress if feasible. However, it was said some of the economies might be disposed of if revenue increased because of improved conditions.

These officials expected revenue from liquor to go far toward replenishing the Treasury before next July. They pointed out, however, that about half of the hoped-for returns of $500,000,000 annually from liquor taxes would be offset by automatic repeal of $227,000,000 of taxes imposed to retire gradually the $3,300,000,000 public works outlay.

Ambassador and Admirals to Tangle on Tee.

The Admirals and the Ambassador will tangle on the tee Tuesday.

For a reported stake of $10 a corner, three admirals and the Japanese Ambassador, Katsuji Debuchi, will fight a battle on the links at the Chevy Chase Club.

Paired with the Ambassador will be Admiral William H. Standley, Naval Operations chief. Their opponents will be two former commanders of the Asiatic fleet, both retired, Rear Admirals Charles B. McVay and Montgomery M. Taylor.

The bets will go to the Navy relief fund.

States Mobilize Jobless Army For U. S. Work

Recruiting of 2,000,000 Men in Four Days, Relief Goal.

The United States yesterday began the task of mobilizing in four days a peace-time army of 2,000,000 men—a force equal in numerical strength to the A. E. F. of wartime. As in wartime, reports of additions to this great army of workers were pouring into Washington from every State.

The recruits are coming from another army, the army of the unemployed. They are going to work without delay, without red tape, without preliminary contract letting, on public works projects. As explained by President Roosevelt to the governors, mayors and public relief officials in Washington Wednesday, they are being taken off the dole and put to work.

This is the first step in the Government's plan to put 4,000,000 men to work in four months. A total of $400,000,000 has been set aside to finance the plan. The Government will retain money to pay 1,000,000 workers on Federal jobs. The remainder will go to the communities.

Quota Enlistment Basis.

Enlistments of workers is on a quota basis, the quotas being computed 75 per cent on population, and 25 per cent on number of families on relief rolls. States and communities are competing for the honor of being first to meet their quotas.

Reports are pouring in with bewildering rapidity. In many instances governors and mayors telegraphed to officials back home to get the work started and in many instances men had actually gone to work on relief projects while executives still were en route from Washington.

Des Moines and Sioux City, Iowa, claimed the honor of being the first and second cities to have complete civil works programs approved. South Dakota claimed the honor of being the first State to put men to work.

Laborers will be paid 40 to 50 cents an hour, depending on locality, and they will work 30-hour weeks. Thus the wages will compare with the minimum fixed in the NRA blanket code.

Kentucky will provide jobs for at least 70,000 men; Wyoming between 2,000 and 3,000; Michigan, 121,000; Indiana, 80,000; Wisconsin, 70,000.

New York Program.

New York State will be given $25,740,000 a month as the Government's share in its civil works program. The State is expected to put 297,000 men to work on local projects and another 99,000 on Federal projects.

Nebraska reported that 3,000 men would go to work before Monday; Minnesota's quota was placed at 56,000; North Dakota, 13,000; New Jersey, 90,000.

Mayor Rossi of San Francisco announced after a conference with Secretary Ickes that a contract for a $2,600,000 Federal building in that city would be let immediately.

The office of Senator Cutting of New Mexico was informed that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has approved a loan application for $225,828,760 for three irrigation projects in New Mexico.

Fort Worth, Tex., is preparing a municipal improvement program to cost $1,800,000.

The Emergency Relief Administration announced that the number of families receiving emergency unemployment relief in 141 cities and urban counties increased from 1,479,232 in September to 1,485,634 in October. The cost of maintaining these families increased from $33,007,529 to $35,899,130.

All Jobless Eligible.

It was emphasized that men need not necessarily be on relief rolls to obtain work on civil works projects. Any man out of a job is invited to apply for employment.

While the job of giving work to the unemployed goes on, Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, signed a voucher for $500,000 to buy low-grade cattle from the Texas ranges. These will be bought directly from farmers at a minimum of $1.75 per hundred pounds.

Hopkins also plans to buy coal for the 1,000,000 or more families remaining on relief rolls.

Another outgrowth of the conference of mayors, here primarily to consider the civil works program, will be a request that Congress assist municipalities in readjusting their debt burdens.

A conference of mayors will be held in Washington the first week in December to consider legislation.

College Press Urged to Bare Death Clews

Princetonian Called Upon to Solve Two Campus Mysteries.

By Westbrook Pegler.

New York, Nov. 16.—Reporters who worked on the Hall-Mills and Lindbergh murder mysteries in New Jersey will enjoy watching efforts of student journalists of Princeton University to compel an intelligent and honest investigation of two violent deaths on the Princeton campus in a little more than a month.

Amateurs of the Daily Princetonian have the sympathy of their older colleagues, the pros, who comprised the newspaper varsity in those two famous cases. Although the young Princeton reporters have made some important progress already, the pros will have their misgivings.

At Princeton on October 9 an old janitor, John Tighe, was found dead on the campus between two university buildings. His skull had been fractured and there were fractures of one arm and several ribs and internal injuries. The verdict was that Tighe either had fallen from a window or had been hit by an automobile. But there was no evidence in support of either of these two widely separated ideas.

Last Saturday night, several hours after the Dartmout-Princeton football game, J. Ferdinand Towner 3d, 23, of Perryman, Md., who had been a spectator, was found dead with both wrists fractured and internal injuries. The official theory was that he had been squeezed against a concrete wall in the press of the crowd after the final whistle.

Thus far, the Princetonian has compelled the admission that Towner was not squashed by the crowd. The Princeton coroner said in regard to the Princetonian's stories on the Towner and Tighe cases, "A lot of people are jumping to conclusions. Some of them should be novelists."

I would suggest to the boys on the Princetonian that they bear down hard and not let any official talk them out of their story. Maybe they can get somebody kicked out of office for jumping at conclusions.

Officialdom Feels Public Pulse Daily

75-Page Digest of News Assembled by Staff of 21 Workers.

Government officials are keeping their ears to the ground for public reaction to their activities. They are doing it through the medium of the Division of Press Intelligence for the United States Government.

The division is headed by Miss Katherine C. Blackburn, who, with a staff of 20 assistants, reads and abstracts more than 400 newspapers every day. The abstracts, in the form of daily bulletins, go to all members of the Cabinet, department heads and such others as the executives designate. It has a circulation of about 100.

18 Added in Month.

Although the division was created more than a month ago, it has been only during the last week that it has been operating at full speed. A month ago Miss Blackburn, one editorial assistant, and a typist were given the job of developing the super-clipping bureau. They didn't even have an office or a desk chair.

Today they occupy six large rooms on the second floor of the Commerce Department Building. They have an impressive file of catalogued clippings and newspapers, and their own 75-page daily bulletin.

The daily bulletin, which is mimeographed by the NRA, is a complete digest of the news and editorial columns of papers from coast to coast.

It is subdivided into departments for ready reference. At a moment's notice the State Department can find out exactly what farmers in Iowa think about protocol and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation can see the daily progress of its gold policy before the euchre and garden ladies' clubs in 400 American communities.

Inaugurated by President.

The division was originally established by Executive order at the time President Roosevelt inaugurated his general recovery program. Administration officials felt that it was the only method of keeping a close daily check on the National pulse as it sprang one recovery institution after another.

The bulletin, which is never slimmer than 60 pages, frequently reaches, on momentous days, the 100-page mark.

Papers are clipped daily for all stories mentioning the Federal Government, from the Department of Commerce's acquarium to the President's fiscal activities. Each clipping is marked with one of 37 symbols representing the subdivision of the Federal activities that get into print. These symbols include those for inflation, State Department, depression, Senate banking hearing and general.

The clippings are then catalogued and filed away, ready for use of any member of the Government withing to consult them.

500 Editorials Daily.

The editorials are given more exhaustive treatment. Mrs. Evelyn Pierce and one assistant manage to go through on an average of 500 editorials a day, read them carefully and write brief four-line abstracts.

Editorial comment is lumped into general classifications, such as favorable or unfavorable to such issues as inflation, NRA, or Senate investigations.

Miss Blackburn and Mrs. Pierce both point out that bureau still is an experiment. It has not been in working order long enough, they say, to prove its value or importance. It may be dissolved as quickly as it was created if it is found Government officials no longer care to know what the country is saying.

Nazis to Recind Church Laws

Non-Aryan Christians Will Be Allowed to Hold Memberships.

Berlin, Nov. 16 (AP).—Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller, leader of German Protestantism, agreed tonight to promulgate a law rescinding all church laws adopted in recent months, including the so-called Aryan statute.

This will mean that non-Aryan Christians, those with Jewish blood, can continue membership in the church and hold offices in it.

Bishop Mueller agreed also to demand from all church bodies and officers a written acknowledgment that they accept the Bible and the articles of faith of the church as binding on them.

These developments came as a concession after days of stormy bickering, that included orders for the ousting of three ministers from their pastorates for challenging the anti-Semitic stand of the Nazi-German Christians.

Bishop Mueller's promise today was taken as a victory for former Bishop Friedrich von Bodelschwingh, the Rev. Martin Niemaeller, one of the suspended pastors, over the Nazi German Christians.

One by one searching vessels gave up the quest after reaching the spot, about 300 miles off the Irish coast, whence the last signal came.

Nazi Code Gives 2d Offenders Life

Provides Sterilization for Sex Crimes.

Berlin, Nov. 16 (AP).—The new Nazi criminal code, containing some of the most drastic penal measures of modern court history, was made public tonight.

Indefinite sentences up to life imprisonment, as in many American State laws, face habitual criminals. Even beggars and tramps can be committed to detention homes for indefinite periods at hard labor.

German judges are given boundless discretion in the cases of criminals "of whom lapses can be assumed."

The code defines habitual criminals as second offenders and sterilization for dangerous sex criminals is provided.

Austria Closes Press To Nazi Disturbers

Vienna, Nov. 16 (AP).—The Austrian news service, Korrespondenz Herzog, reported today the government has decided to eliminate from the newspapers report of Nazi activities, such as noise bombings and displaying the swastika.

In other words, silence will be employed as a weapon against Nazi disturbances, and explosions from now on are to be heard only as far as the noise actually carries.

Boston, Nov. 16 (AP).—A workman who helped build Boston's new, 22-story granite-and-steel Federal Building called at the office of Postmaster William E. Hurley today and asked that a hole be knocked in an inside wall so he could retrieve his overalls.

Puzzled by his concern over a pair of overalls officials finally obtained the admission that in one of the pockets was a quart of Kentucky rye..

Postmaster Hurley explained he could not tear down the walls of the postoffice for two quarts.

Bishops Blame Ills on Voters

Catholic Leaders Declare Depression Forces at Work for Years.

(Associated Press.)

The bishops of the administrative committee of the National Catholic Welfare Conference in a statement yesterday said the upset of the financial and economic structure "had its roots in forces that had been corroding and undermining the foundations of law, justice and morality for years."

Charging directly to voters many political, economic and social ills, the bishops said wise legislation could have averted many of them.

"The responsibility for the situation lies at the door of the people at large, and the cure is in their hands," they added.

Recognizing the gravity of present conditions the bishops contonued:

"It would be craven to entertain for a moment the thought that the situation is beyond cure, or that it calls for remedies so drastic as Communism or a dictatorship."

Turning to the President's recovery program, they said:

"It is the best he could devise, it is the best Congress could construct and any attempt to make partisan profit out of the present misery and distress is a crime against fair dealing and humanity."

Ritchie to Call Liquor-Control Session Early

Special Assembly Meeting Scheduled to Open in Next Week.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 16 (Spl.). Gov. Ritchie indicated today that he will call the Maryland General Assembly into special session next Thursday, certainly not later than Saturday.

The primary object will be to adopt liquor control laws, although it is expected other important measures will be presented.

The governor's liquor plan today drew criticism from several quarters. Objections appear to center around proposed return to the open saloon, described in the executive's plan as the "tavern," and high cost of licenses coupled with the suggested excise tax of $1.10 a gallon on liquor.

Those dissenting included Senator David G. McIntosh, Baltimore County; Walter H. Buch, chairman of the executive committee of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment; Edgar Allan Poe, jr., chairman of the State branch of the Crusaders, and Mayor Howard W. Jackson, Baltimore City.

Norris Raps Urge To Gather Money

Senator Asks Death Taxes and Shorter Hours.

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 16 (AP).—Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, said tonight selfish ambition to accumulate money must be cured by law if civilization is to stand.

As permanent remedies for the economic conditions of today he recommended progressive taxes upon inheritance to redistribute wealth, shorter hours for labor, and a humanizing of the statute books.

Senator Norris was here to receive the Cardinal Newman award for statesmanship and to speak on "The New Civilization."

Sunken Boat Fails To Yield Treasure

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 16 (AP).—The assertion that nothing of value has been salvaged from the treasure ship Merida, lying in 200 feet of water 60 miles off the Virginia coast, was made in the U. S. District Court yesterday when the Sub-Ocean Salvage Co., owner of the salvage steam tug Salvor, filed answers to libels pending against it in the court.

All the libels are for wages to crew members of the Salvor on expeditions to the Merida in attempts to raise to the surface silver and gold believed stored on the vessel.

Witnesses Say Screams Preceded Gaines' Death

Spokane, Wash., Nov. 16 (AP).—Her composure regained after an hysterical outburst yesterday, Lily Banka Gaines sat unmoved in court today as three witnesses graphically described the sound of the shots and screams that preceded the slaying of her husband, Dr. James I. Gaines.

Mrs. Gaines, an attractive brunette, is being tried on a first-degree murder charge, accused of firing the three shots that killed the wealthy sportsman last August 15.

Man Who Gave Vote to Lincoln Becomes Citizen

Somerville, N. J., Nov. 16 (AP).—Valentine Swody, 94, who voted for Lincoln in 1860 and has been voting ever since, became a naturalized American citizen today.

Until he applied for an old-age pension recently, Swody had never known that through all the 73 years in which he voted in American elections, he was a German subject.

Somebody told him, long ago, that because he came to this country before he was 21, he was an American citizen.

Today he received his citizenship papers from Judge John F. Reger.

"All I can say is that you have exercised the right of franchise so long, I hope you will continue to do so for another 10 or 20 years," the judge told him.

Woman Loses In Henderson Estate Fight

Justice Adkins Rules Niece Failed to Prove Claim for $288,000.

A suit for $288,000 against the estate of Mrs. John B. Henderson, grand dame of Washington society, instituted by a niece of the late Senator John B. Henderson, builder of Boundary Castle, was dismissed yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Jesse C. Adkins.

The action was brought by Mrs. Ione W. Markle, of Memphis, Tenn., who contended that Mrs. Henderson and her late son, John B. Henderson, jr., received the estate of the senator under an agreement to pay $100,000 to Mrs. Markle.

Justice Adkins ruled that Mrs. Markle did not prove her contention that Senator Henderson intended to bequeath the $100,000 to her and also failed to show there had been an agreement that Mrs. Henderson or her son should pay the sum. Mrs. Markle sought the payment of the $100,000 plus interest.

Prior to their marriage in 1904, Markle testified, Senator Henderson promised he would settle $100,000 upon them. Subsequently, he testified, the agreement was affirmed by Mrs. Henderson and her son. The estate was represented by Spencer Gordon, of Covington, Burling & Rublee.

Banana Gingerbread Shortcake

Cream 3 tablespoons shortening and ½ cup sugar thoroughly. Add one beaten egg and ½ cup molasses. Sift together and add 1¾ cups flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon soda, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon ginger, ½ teaspoon cinnamon. When thoroughly mixed, add ½ cup boiling water. Bake in moderate oven (375° F.) 20 to 25 minutes in two greased 8 or 9-inch layer pans. Cool, place 2 or 3 sliced bananas between and on top of layers. Cover with 1 cup heavy cream, whipped, and banana slices. Serves six to eight.

Here's the way to tell when and how to use bananas: If yellow tipped with green, that's your cooking signal. Bake in the skin, just as you bake potatoes. Or peel and broil, or brown in a little fat as a marvelous year-round "vegetable."

When yellow ripe, they're perfect for salads and desserts or for eating as a fruit, yet still firm enough for cooking.

Yellow flecked with brown means fully ripe—the high point of mellow deliciousness—to peel and eat "as is"... to slice and serve with milk for a well-balanced breakfast, lunch or supper, in between meals and for tempting desserts.

French Views of the Dollar.

The French naturally are concerned about the possible effects of the R. F. C. gold-buying campaign upon their own reserves. However, their financial writers were inclined from the beginning to believe that relatively small purchases of foreign gold would suffice to accelerate the decline in the exchange value of the dollar, as its rapid progressive depreciation has been caused primarily by the flight of capital from this country, accentuated by the announcement of the gold-buying plans of the Administration. On Wednesday, in fact, the domestic price of newly mined gold was set below the dollar price ruling abroad for gold, in face of a precipitate drop in the exchange value of the dollar.

According to French views, the R. F. C. would find it impossible to obtain any large amount of gold through the purchase and redemption of francs, even if such purchases seemed necessary to facilitate the depreciation of the dollar. "What holders of franc exchange would be foolish enough," a writer for Le Temps inquires, "to transfer their funds to America at a time when that country is chiefly concerned to depreciate its own money, and the capital of its own citizens is being hastily withdrawn to escape the effects of this methodical destruction? Given the impossible assumption that the American Government wished to attack the franc, it would risk complete annhilation of the value of the dollar before achieving its purpose."

Of course, the French are worried about the outlook for the franc, not because of the direct consequences of our gold-buying operations, but because of uncertainty regarding their eventual outcome and anxiety about the domestic situation which constitute a much greater threat to the franc than an external drain upon France's immense gold reserve.

The Chest Drive Opens.

A volunteer army of 6,000 men and women is in the field today, asking the people of Washington to open their hearts and give as much as they can spare for community welfare work. In spite of hard times, the Community Chest must be filled. Failure to respond to this call would impose cruel hardships upon citizens of the District who are unable to care for themselves.

Temporary relief work which is being carried on by the Government does not duplicate the permanent service rendered to the community by the members of the chest organization. Needs supplied through the agencies dependent upon the Community Chest for funds are of a continuing nature. Homes for cripples, hospitals, character building establishments, &c., should function in times of depression or prosperity.

Washingtonians have been liberal in supplying funds for social welfare work in the past. They may be expected to respond again to the humanitarian appeal of the Community Chest. If every one will do his or her part, the chest can be filled without undue sacrifice on the part of any one.

A Code for Poets.

Grave problems arise out of the demand of the Poet Laureate League for a code of fair competition for bards. Time was when poets would remain in their garrets and spurn any outside supervision of their craft with the view of enhancing the dollar value of their works. But some of the modern producers of verse seem to have caught the spirit of the times.

Only unthinking people, according to a statement filed along with the proposed code, subscribe to the theory that poetry should be written for its beauty and art alone. "If poets were gods instead of being the sons of gods," the statement continues, "it would be quite possible for them to ply their art while they subsisted on star dust and drank the dregs of praise and applause, but, being quite human and subject to the comman wants of man, they must eat." Hence, these bards are willing to harness the muse with an NRA code.

Under the provisions of the recovery act, poetry, as an industry, seems to be entitled to the benefits of a partnership with Uncle Sam. Every publisher in the country can testify to overproduction of verse. Cut-throat competition is so keen that many bards are crowded to the wall. No estimate of the number of potential poets in the United States has been made, but they are legion. If the belief that poetry springs from agitated minds is true, the production of verse must have been greatly accelerated in the last few years.

It is obvious that this excessive outpouring of soul complaints ought to be curbed. The verse of established bards who work a six-hour day and a five-day week is jeopardized by the competition of poetic chiselers who burn midnight oil. Let the NRA decree that all verse written between 4 p. m. and 9 a. m. shall be plowed under, or at any rate barred from interstate commerce.

Poets launch forth into song without knowing that a competitor may be exploiting the same subject, thus causing duplication and a burdensome surplus which is difficult to dispose of in the world market. By all means let the Blue Eagle perch on Parnassus!

The District Budget.

Commissioner Hazen's suggestion that control over the District budget be removed from the Federal Bureau of the Budget is worthy of consideration. There is, of course, some relationship between the District and the Federal budgets, inasmuch as Congress contributes a portion of the cost of maintaining the National Capital. But that relationship is rather distant. The best interests of the District would be served by formulation of its budget on the basis of local needs and resources.

When the District Commissioners are required to submit their estimates of expenditures to the Budget Bureau for approval there is a tendency to contract or expand the local budget along with Federal expenditures. In the last few years this tendency has imposed a number of hardships upon the District. Urgent school construction in Washington has been neglected, although District tax revenue together with a fair Federal contribution would provide necessary funds for school purposes.

The District budget should stand on its own merits. The estimated annual needs of the District should be submitted directly to Congress by the Commissioners. The District committees as well as the Senate and House could accept or modify the budget prepared by the Commissioners.

The present unsatisfactory financial relationship between the Government and the District might be relieved to some extent if the authority of the Budget Bureau over local finances were ended. That agency is inclined to base its estimates on a small Federal contribution to maintenance of the Capital with a view to conserving the Government's income. Complete separation of the two budgets might induce Congress to consider more thoroughly its obligation to the District as the seat of the National Government.

A Tuberculosis Serum.

Dr. Stephen L. Maher, an authority on tuberculosis, recently announced the discovery of an acid that kills tubercular germs in test tubes. He is hopeful that sooner or later it may be possible to develop a tubercular serum from its properties. Whether the acid will destroy tubercular microbes in human bodies or whether it can be injected without injurious consequences has not been determined and is admitted by Dr. Maher to be speculative. Nevertheless, he felt that the prospects were sufficiently promising to justify inviting a number of tuberculosis investigators to meet with him and consider the possibilities of his discovery. The doctor declares that the development of an effective tuberculosis serum would be the "greatest prize in the world."

At the beginning of the present century, tuberculosis caused more deaths than any other disease, accounting for 201.9 deaths per 100,000 of population. By 1932 it had been relegated to last place among the six leading diseases, being responsible for 63 deaths for every 100,000 of population. Thus in three decades tuberculosis has been shorn of nearly 70 per cent of its turn-of-the-century destructiveness. This notable progress was due to a number of factors, including, of course, earlier detection resulting from widespread publicity concerning the traits of the malady.

Dr. Maher's belief in a tuberculosis serum is not a new faith. The isolator of the germ, the famed Dr. Robert Koch, rural German physician, experimented at great length to develop an anti-toxin, but failed. Unlike diphtheria bacilli, tubercules do not possess the property of manufacturing within themselves a secretion which, when collected and injected into the body of the sufferer, turn on their kinfolk. Abandoning Koch's efforts to make tubercular microbes generate within themselves a suicide fluid, Dr. Maher in his laboratory experiments has taken another deadly germ of the cocci family and caused it to throw off an acid harmless to itself but mortal to tubercules.

Should he succeed in materializing the earlier dream of Koch and perfect a serum for tuberculosis Dr. Maher undoubtedly will win for himself a secure place among the great figures of medicine.

Fascism Versus Capitalism.

Premier Mussolini has announced the eventual abolition of the Italian Chamber of Deputies, which will be replaced by a chain of guilds, representing industry and labor, united through a central body, the National Council of Corporations. At a later date, the council will be vested with certain legislative powers and placed in general control of the management of the country's economic affairs.

After noting that the rise of the Fascist party had destroyed political liberalism, the Premier, in outlining his plans for the future "corporative" state, said: "Today, we bury economic liberalism." His advice to other countries that wish to follow Italy's example is first to set up a single party with perfect political discipline, and then to establish a "totalitarian" state.

The speeches of Premier Mussolini are conspicuous for clarity and fearlessness, and for that reason alone they are usually well worth reading. In the present instance, the Premier has done the cause of liberalism throughout the world a signal service by his frank exposure of the fundamental irreconcilability of private capitalism with the methods and objectives of the corporative state; that is, a state in which industry is organized into guilds and trade unions by dictatorial decree.

With a very deliberate intention of emphasizing this contrast, the Premier has devoted a large part of his address to an attack upon the capitalistic system, which he considers to be decadent. The dynamic phase of capital, he asserts, ended in 1870, and was succeeded by a period of cartels, trusts and combinations which ended the era of free competition and made governmental intervention necessary. The third and last phase is characterized as a "pathological" post-war development of a capitalistic system, which, in his opinion, has survived its usefulness.

The chief flaw in Premier Mussolini's argument lies in his assumption that because governmental intervention has become necessary to control competitive excesses and correct the maladjustments of a crisis, the system itself is discredited. Once that belief is firmly rooted in the national consciousness, undoubtedly it tends to be confirmed by a growing reliance upon government intervention as an alternative to independent business enterprise, competitively controlled and regulated.

Capitalism necessarily becomes decadent if forced to function in an environment which stifles initiative. Industrial expansion may take place, and may in fact be relatively rapid, under an autocratic government which not only suppresses political liberty but controls industrial activities. But the people cease to be the arbiters of their own economic fate under such conditions. As the allocation of new capital and the control of investment processes fall more and more into the hands of governmental agencies, state planning takes the place of private initiative, and as a result the people must submit more and more to bureaucratic direction and control of their activities.

In announcing a recent large bond issue of the Industrial Reconstruction Institute, Premier Mussolini said significantly that the government "wished to reeducate the investor to participate directly in the stocks of productive activities through opportune investments which assure him the worth of his investment, protect struggling companies from speculative maneuvers and prevent companies which remain on their feet from being absorbed by overlarge trusts." Incidentally, the announced bond issue guaranteed a minimum return to the investor, who plainly is being used merely as an instrumentality to further the aims of the state.

For some years the Italian government has been giving liberal assistance to private industry, and the authorities have been in a position to exercise extensive control over the flow of new capital, since the savings of the people are held largely in public institutions. According to reports, under the Fascist regime Italy has made relatively rapid progress industrially speaking, considering the conditions that have prevailed throughout the world of late years. However, her people have paid a high price for these material gains by forfeiting the political and economic liberties which Premier Mussolini exultantly proclaims to be "buried."

Restored Williamsburg.

From the New York Times.

In a few days a strange thing will be seen in the old part of Williamsburg, Va.—the tearing up of modern streets in order to replace their surfaces with flag and cobblestones. Already many of the buildings of the colonial period have been reconstructed and tourists will soon have the opportunity of seeing the Williamsburg of pre-Revolutionary times. It is still a little place of about 3,000 inhabitants, its chief distinction the College of William and Mary. The idea of restoring the colonial part of Williamsburg must be credited to Dr. W. A. R. Goodwin, one of its professors. When he was made an honorary member of the American Institute of Architects a citation said: "He has made architecture, history and archeology in America his eternal debtors. Without his vision, his courage and his energy, the restoration of Williamsburg would never have occurred." At the same time John D. Rockefeller, jr., was similarly honored by the institute, and he authorized Dr. Goodwin to purchase colonial buildings in Williamsburg in his own name. He spent $1,850,000 in acquiring properties needed. For 18 months he kept the secret. At a mass meeting of citizens to vote upon the enterprise he was obliged to name his chief patron.

At the University Club of Baltimore on Friday last Dr. Goodwin told the whole story. Henry Ford had been asked to finance the reconstruction, but declined. An address by Dr. Goodwin before the Phi Beta Kappa society in New York interested Mr. Rockefeller; the two men were introduced, and the restoration of colonial Williamsburg was then and there made possible. Many colonial memories cluster about Williamsburg. Bruton Parish Church was built in 1717. From the powder magazine (1714) Lord Dunmore removed the munitions after the Battle of Lexington. Williamsburg was the capital of the province when Patrick Henry made his deathless speech against the stamp act, on May 30, 1765. Washington's headquarters were in the George Wythe house during the siege of Yorktown. The Virginia Gazette was established there in 1736. A hundred years before the Revolution Nathaniel Bacon held his "rebel" assembly at Middle Plantation, by which name Williamsburg was formerly known. September a year ago the re-created Raleigh Tavern, where royal governors danced and patriots met to conspire, was opened as an exhibition building. Colonial Williamsburg when fully restored will be a museum a mile square.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

The American Language.

The news that Mr. H. L. Mencken would resign the editorship of the American Mercury was quickly followed by the statement that he intended to revise and double the size of his book, the American Language, first published in 1918. This is good news: it is an important work.

The differences between British and American pronunciation of the same language is a perennial source of discussion; and it ought to be, for it is a highly interesting matter. One of the chief differences in pronunciation is in words like military, necessary, cemetery, where the American gives a secondary accent on the third syllable, whereas the Englishman pronounces them after the fashion of the famous amateur detective, Philo Vance. I was walking around New Haven years ago with Sidney Lee, and when he asked what a certain building was, I replied that it was a laboratory. "Why do you say laborat-Ory?" "What do you say?" "LaBAHotry." The word jewelry is pronounced exactly alike by Americans and British; but here the spelling is different, the English spell jewellery.

Doctrinal and capitalist sound queer to American ears when accented on the second syllable; trait is pronounced like tray; fracas rhymes with darker; clerk, Berkeley, Derby, Lord Bertie are all pronounced as if the e were an a. The English call the last letter of the alphabet zed. I have no idea whence was derived the English pronunciation of the army officer, leftenant. French, Germans, Americans all pronounce the u.

A striking difference between British and Americans is in the vowel o; Barnard Shaw told me that no two persons in the world pronounced the word cross alike. But the American o is round, whereas the English pronounce the o in no very much like u in murder. There are a million other differences.

Forty Shirts Aren't a Surplus While 39 Men Can't Buy a Shirt.

By Robert Quillen.

All of us make unintelligent use of the word "surplus." We speak of a thing that does not exist.

With the invention of the steam engine, all modern nations began to industrialize. And almost at once they faced the problem of marketing manufactured goods that could not be sold at home.

Their search for markets made the history of a century. It coined the phrase: "Trade follows the flag." It increased tax burdens, built navies, and, with few minor exceptions, caused every war of this machine age.

Yet all the while each nation has had within its borders a potential market able to consume all of its products.

Why, then, did the nations spend so many billions and spill so much blood to win foreign markets? The explanation is very simple.

Manufacturers, and shareholders in their businesses, thought only in terms of immediate profit. And the less money paid as wages, the more was left to divide as dividends.

Wage-earner in every land—including our own—were paid the minimum that would insure industrial peace. Workers lived in shacks and longed in vain for the comforts and luxuries that surrounded them.

There was a "surplus" because millions of workers were too poor to buy the things they made.

That condition is the cause of our present woe.

Our leaders are cheapening our currency to win foreign markets—and thus lessening every wage-earner's ability to buy—while millions of our own people are given no opportunity to consume "surplus" goods.

The whole system is wrong—not only morally wrong, but logically and economically wrong.

Why spend billions to win foreign markets when fair wages would enable our own people to consume everything we produce?

In every village in the land are hundreds of wage-earning families that have no cars, no radios, no electric refrigerators, no bath tubs—and every one would spend more money for meat, fruit, clothing and shoes, if they had it.

Scrap the old system and our "surplus" will disappear. Increase the reward of workers until they are able to consume everything the country produces.

There you have a market, obtained without cost, that will pay dividends on industry's watered stock.

Let's have no silly talk of "surpluses" while one American family wants something it can't buy.

Just Folks.

By Edgar A. Guest.

The Needful Change.

If I had a paper to write on the times
I wouldn't collect many figures to show
What's happened to dollars and quarters and dimes
Or what has become of the crops that we grow.
I'd pass up inflation as too deep for me,
And leave the cold records to stand on the shelves,
For I'm sure this old world would much happier be
If we'd think more of others and less of ourselves.

Things have turned topsy-turvy, but hatred and rage
Won't set them aright nor will brickbats and sticks.
It's not so much figures on some ledger page,
But our hearts and our minds that perhaps we should fix.
It may be too much out of life we demand
And seeking for pleasures we've all gone astray.
Contentment's not made by the law of the land
But must come to us all in the old-fashioned way.

The old-fashioned honor that lives to its word,
The old-fashioned courage that keeps to its creed,
A little less hatred when wrong has occurred,
A little more faith may be all that we need.
Statistics I'm sure are oft misunderstood,
But when labor and capital walk hand in hand
With respect for each other I know 'twill be good
For the peace of the home and the peace of the land.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

WELL, SIR, if Crack-Down Johnson is not up against a big cracking-down proposition now I'll eat my hat, or as the French say, Je mangerai mon chapeau.

BARGERON.

The man went out West and came back with his crack-down propensities fortified by the summary way they have of doing things out there. He rushed to the White House almost immediately he left the train with a briefcase full of crack-down ideas, of which he sought the President's approval.

And while he is doing this what should happen but trouble in his own house. A movement is launched to unionize the NRA employes and demand shorter hours, higher wages and a code. It should give the Crack-Down a pause. It is enough to change his whole outlook on life. It is a lesson in the gratefulness of human beings.

ON the surface now this is nothing more than a movement begun by a restless young woman in Leo Wollman's office who sees no reason why if the rest of the country is to be unionized and codified she and her associates should not.

In reality it is more than that. It is a stab in the back just at a time when Crack-Down needs all the support he can get. Now what could be worse at a time when opposition is developing against the NRA, when the situation is such that he sees the need for more force, than for the story to go around the country that his employes are demanding that he practice what he preaches, that he work them reasonable hours and give them higher pay? I am not arguing the merits of the employes' claims. Suffice to say is that there was such a stampede to get employment at the NRA, and still is a constant stream of applicants, that one would think those fortunate enough to get employment would be reasonably satisfied, to say the least.

* * * *

THEY are not in the class with other Government employes, you know. They are paid out of Public Works funds, money appropriated by Congress to give employment in this country. No other money with which to operate the NRA exists. The NRA has been rather liberal in its employment policy, too, reasoning that the purpose of the Public Works fund is to give work.

There is a limit to the fund, of course. The appropriation was $3,100,000,000. Naturally, the idea is to spread this over as many workers as possible.

The movement for increased wages and shorter hours ignores the fundamental philosophy of the fund, as well as the unselfish philosophy which the NRA is trying to sell to employers of the land. There is no thought in the movement that if the NRA workers get more of the funds someone else will be denied. No siree, they simply want theirs and the rest of the unemployed may do as best they can.

* * * *

NOW one hardly would expect the restless young lady who launched the movement to take all of this into consideration. But it happens that the movement originated in the office of Leo Wollman and is being encouraged by the American Federation of Labor.

Mr. Woolman is one of the so-called new type of labor leaders—a social philosopher, he is called. In the arguments I have heard, pro and con, as to whether labor should be permitted to take over the running of the Government, those taking the affirmative side usually have advanced Mr. Wollman as an example of what high-class and capable governmental runners we would have.

* * * *

I CAN hardly think of any one who has more reason to feel kindly toward the NRA than he. He has been one of its main influences. And labor leaders generally insist it has been one of the greatest breaks they have ever got. Johnson certainly has leaned over backward to please them. So great has been their influence in the NRA's administration, in fact, that it has frightened former business supporters and now is encountering trouble a-plenty.

And then when it gets into trouble the very men it has befriended deliberately put it into a position for ridicule of the most devastating kind. If this doesn't give Gen. Johnson a new slant on things, nothing will.

MEN SWAYED BY COLOR.

Men as a class are more responsive to color than women, in the opinion of Prof. Joseph Cummings Chase, head of the art department of Hunter College and a noted portrait painter.

Prof. Chase's researches, he says, have led him to believe that orange produces the most pleasant reaction of all the colors in the spectrum, though most men claim blue as their favorite. Feminine esthetic-ism, he adds, shows a marked partiality to nuances which do not ordinarily interest men, such as the so-called "twilight colors" of orchid, lavender, gray-blue and other pastel shades.

Mr. Chase, who was the official portrait painter with the American armies overseas, according to the New York Times, is the author of several books, and 50 of his canvases hang in the National Gallery at Washington.

Federal Liquor Monopoly Plan Wins Support

New Proposal Would Put U. S. in Role of Wholesaler.

(Associated Press.)

The proposal to organize a Federal Government Corporation forming a monopoly in liquor similar to those in operation in other countries came to the foreground yesterday in discussions of the Administration's repeal program.

There were indications it was meeting strong resistance, both from distillers and members of the interdepartmental committee and the legislative committees dealing with repeal. It also had strong backing. In some circles President Roosevelt was reported to be looking with favor upon the proposal provided details can be arranged.

The plan contemplates Federal licensing of distillers with a limitation of their profits. The figures 8 and 10 per cent have been advanced. The liquor would be turned over to the Government, which would act as a wholesaler, adding to the price it paid the distiller whatever figure was desired in the way of revenues.

It was not contemplated that the Federal Government would have any connection with retail sales, although it might exert control through retailers' codes.

Those pushing the plan have been endeavoring to prove its legality and to demonstrate it would be an effective method of controlling the supply and distribution and a simpler method of collecting revenue from the liquor industry than the adoption of a distillers' code.

"What Is School?" Asks Cave Girl

Carolina Hermit Family Spurns Aid; Dad Is "King"

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 16 (AP).—A few tobacco sacks with which to make "some bed spreads" is the only desire of a family of cave dwellers near here who have isolated themselves from civilzation and refused any sort of relief.

Reports of the family were made by Mrs. M. H. Haltiwanger, Lexington County relief worker, who said the father is "king" over his wife and two daughters.

The eldest of the daughters is 18 and, when asked about an education, wanted to know "What is school?"

Ohio City Suffers $135,000 Fire Loss

Ice Plant and Four Homes Burn in Middleport.

Pomeroy, Ohio, Nov. 16 (AP).—Fire destroyed Coverts Baking & Ice Co. and four residences at Middleport today, with a loss estimated by owners of the property as $135,000.

Fire companies from Middleport, Pomeroy, Rutland, Gallipolis and Point Pleasant, W. Va., fought the blaze for three hours, high winds and low-water pressure being severe handicaps.

Forty men were thrown out of work by the fire. An unidentified youth who rescued a dog was cheered by spectators.

Husband Exonerated In Death of Wife

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 16 (AP).—Magistrate John T. Farrell, of Halethorpe, acting as coroner, yesterday exonerated George M. Howard, of Pinehurst, N. C., from all blame in connection with the death of his wife on the Baltimore-Washington boulevard Tuesday night.

Mrs. Howard was killed when the car, driven by her husband, overturned. Howard told officers his car had been sidewiped by another, causing him to lose control. He escaped with bruises.

Profit in Ocean Mail Contracts Told at Query

$782,000 on $10,000 Investment, Steamship Official Testifies.

Evidence that the South Atlantic Steamship Co. and an affiliated concern made a total net profit of $834,000 during the four years that they have had a Government mail contract was laid yesterday before the Senate committee investigating ocean and air mail contracts.

In addition, the Dixie Stevedoring Co., a subsidiary of the South Atlantic Steamship Line, which has a capital investment of $10,000, made a total of $782,000 in net profits and dividends during the same years.

Raymond D. Sullivan, vice president of the South Atlantic of Delaware, who is also vice president of the South Atlantic Steamship Line of Georgia, and president of the Dixie Stevedoring Co., told senators of the organization of the Delaware corporation, which holds the mail contract.

It was created in 1926 when it bought ten ships from the Government for $1.05 a deadweight ton, totaling $239,900. These ships had originally cost the Government $16,055,000, or $210 a deadweight ton.

However, the company turned the ships over to the South Atlantic Steamship Lines of Georgia for operation. Questioned by Chairman Black (Democrat), Aabama, the witness said this transfer was made because the owners did not have the proper set-up to operate the vessels.

"But the two companies have the same officers, don't they?" asked Black. "That seems like the same set-up to me."

Sullivan admitted the list of officers had been the same until a year ago, when the former president died.

H. G. Strachan, president of the Strachan Steamship Co. and a major stockholder of the line holding the mail contract, testified that three stevedoring concerns which his line owns paid nearly $300,000 in dividends on a total of $26,000 capital investment in the three companies.

NRA Chief Bows To Staff's Demands

I looked it over. In the main, it is all right, but it was unavoidable that in fitting such an organization as ours into the strait-jacket of Government rules certain inequities resulted. I found, for instance, that in some cases salaries had been cut 30 per cent. I will, of course, see to it that where injustices have been done they will be corrected.

Regular Hours Difficult.

"Very naturally, with the job we had in hand there could not be regular hours, either for stenographers or secretaries or executives. The work had to be gotten out and it was not always practical to substitute one employe for another at the expiration of a day of normal working hours. Now, when what we have to do has been, in a measure, systematized, it will be possible to arrange things on a more normal basis.

"Out of the confusion of the pioneer period we have evolved into a fairly effective business machine. I realize that we have had a tremendous amount of fine, loyal and uncomplaining service. Our people have stood the strain of a terrific rush and are entitled to have conditions made as pleasant and satisfactory as it is possible to make them. And that is what we intend to do."

Court Discharges 27 Under Liquor Probation

Freeport, Ill., Nov. 16 (AP).—Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward today discharged 27 men and one woman who a year ago were placed on probation after pleading guilty to prohibition law violations.

Chief Probation Officer William McGrath recommended the discharges on the grounds that the prohibition act under which they were prosecuted no longer prevails.

Mice Yield Serum Doctors Hope May Prevent Sleeping Sickness

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Discovery in the blood of St. Louis sleeping sickness convalescents of substances which protect mice against the disease was announced tonight by the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research.

The announcement adds evidence for a hope generally expressed by medical men that in the serum of human beings or of animals having sleeping sickness, there will be found ultimately one of the immunizing agents useful for protection against encephalitis.

The institute studies have not advanced to the point of testing this serum on human beings. The immunizing agent was detected during extensive experiments of much greater scientific interest, which were also announced tonight.

These appear to disclose the active cause of the disease. They are described by Leslie T. Webster and George L. Fite, who inoculated the brains of mice with brain tissue taken last summer from fatal cases of sleeping sickness.

The mice mostly developed sleeping sickness.

The experiments indicated pointedly that the cause of the disease is a virus, which can not be seen under a microscope nor caught in the finest filter.

Especially significant is the fact that when this infected mouse brain was instilled into the noses of other mice, they developed virtually 100 per cent fatal signs of sleeping sickness.

Bent upon compounding a serum which will be a weapon against encephalitis, or sleeping sickness, the United States Public Health Service is starting a Nation-wide survey to contact persons who have suffered from the disease.

Microbe hunters from Washington will go to every city which has or has had cases of encephalitis. With the assistance of health officers, they will make a house-to-house canvass to obtain blood samples for purposes of comparison.

Particular emphasis will be given cases which occurred between July and October, when the St. Louis epidemic was at its worst.

Express Train Derailed; 130 in Pullmans Shaken

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 16 (AP).—One hundred and thirty passengers on the Buffalo-Cincinnati express of the Big Four Railroad were shaken up today when seven pullman cars were derailed south of Worthington near here. None required even first aid treatment from doctors and nurses who were rushed to the scene.

Breakage of a rail was blamed by railroad officials.

Radio Waves and Ripples

"MAN'S contact with medicine is a continual recital of dramatic incidents."

Reading this in continuity for WJSV's first effort at air dramatization of the aboriginal beginnings of the corner drug store, we sensed at once that Mr. Chance, new production director at the Columbia station, is planning a series of script shows of indefinite duration.

You may by this time have begun to suspect that WJSV is putting to drama for air production, the slow rise of pharmacy, from discovery of the salutary uses of quinine by a fevered Nardu native in the seventeenth century to Doc Munyon.

First performance will be Saturday, November 25, which should give you plenty of time to get out of town. Direction will be by Ronald Dawson, sponsorship by the Washington Retail Druggists.

WJSV says it is to be a sustaining program, perhaps meaning it has not yet been able to convince druggists it should be paid for.

England, Holland, Germany, France, Italy, Canada, Mexico, Brazil, Argentina, Hawaii, the Philippines, Spain, Russia, Japan, India, Venezuela and a half dozen other countries will be picked up by short-wave from R. C. A. stations at Riverhead, L. I., and Point Reyes, Calif.

It's to be a demonstration of R. C. A.'s facility in communicating with the world and a Radio City Week broadcast rolled into one.

Dr. Frank Conrad, father of modern broadcasting, tells of radio's growth as a part of N. B. C.'s celebrating broadcasts today at 2:30 p. m. It's 13 years since the first program was put on the air from Pittsburgh's pioneer station, KDKA.

Dr. Conrad began broadcasting from a Pittsburgh garage to a group of "wireless" fan friends.

Other special N. B. C. broadcasts today include: Radio Old-timers of the Middle West, 6 p. m., WEAF; Hawaii's Tribute to Radio City, 6:30 p. m., WJZ; Labor's Tribute to Radio City, American Federation of Labor President William Green, WJZ, 10:30 p. m.; the Theater Presents, WEAF-WJZ, 12:15 p. m.

There were several who observed a wave of self-consciousness sweep the Association of National Advertisers' banquet as Elder Michaux came out to close the show at the Wardman Wednesday night.

"I'm going to turn this cabaret into a church," the Church of God pastor was quoted as saying.

These was complete silence. Cigars and cigarettes were ground out. Several bottles were removed from table tops.

Dr. Luther Reichelderfer heard by radio the swearing in of his successors on the District Commission yesterday. He asked that the power dial on his speaker be turned on full so the broadcast would reach his bedroom.

Another popular brand of cigarettes is bringing a new program to a Columbia microphone this month, probably the twenty-first or twenty-seventh. Glenn Gray's Casa Loma Orchestra is understood to be the only talent signed thus far.

Lumbago kept WMAL's Arthur Godfrey in bed yesterday and elected Announcer Robert Youse president pro tem. of the Breakfast Club. Youse possibly would have been more appreciative of the opportunity fate tossed into his lap had he not worked until after the preceding midnight. Would youse?

WRC Tenor-Pianist Charles Luke is believed to hold the greatest-number-of-broadcasts-a-day record. He made five recently, three of them last-minute fill-ins.

Dr. M. Dorsey Magee, president of the District Chapter of the Izaak Walton League, goes on the Rod and Stream program, WMAL, 5:15 p. m. today.

WOL has given Announcer John Watts the job he lost when the Amalgamated Broadcasting System folded up. With Harold Reed alternating between the microphone and the controls, WOL feels it has all the help it needs for its newly-expanded broadcast schedule.

Another WOL Opportunity Night "find" is Rex Newton, self-accompanying singer of popular melodies. Newton's first program was yesterday afternoon.

First, a little convivial harmony, then an audition—"just for fun"—and Grace McCarty, Hollie Collins and Ruth Doring (left to right), soon became "The Dairymaids," heard with Olsen and Johnson on Columbia tonight.

Two Kidnapers Admit Murder Of Hart Youth

Victim Tied and Thrown Alive Into Bay, His Abductors State.

obtained in San Jose before we started.

"When Holmes first struck Hart he cried 'help, help,' but Holmes hit him again and knocked him unconscious.

"Then I took some baling wire and bound the arms of Brooke Hart around his body.

"We lifted him on to the railing of the bridge and tossed him into the bay. I recall as we lifted him he struggled slightly.

"While we were riding in the car with Hart we asked him to turn over his money, which he did. His wallet contained a $5 bill and $2.50 in silver. We divided the money and I kept the wallet.

"I went to the Whitcomb Hotel and phoned to the Hart residence in San Jose. Some man answered and I inquired for Mr. Hart. Then some girl answered and I told her her brother was being held for $40,000 ransom, and if the family notified the police they would never see Brooke Hart again.

"I had obtained an envelope at home and when I got to Tracy en route to Sacramento I sent a message to Mr. Hart on a card printed by Holmes, and mailed from Sacramento that night.

"I remained in Sacramento a few minutes, got a bite to eat and returned to San Jose.

"I left San Jose about 11 in the morning with a second letter and drove to San Francisco and mailed it.

"I did not see Holmes until the following day. We went by Hart's store Tuesday and saw the numeral in the window as ordered. That night I called Charles O'Brien, jr., personal friend of Brooke Hart's, and gave Mr. O'Brien a message to deliver to Mr. Hart demanding further action.

Father Failed to Appear.

"This call was placed by Holmes from a pay station in a building in which Mr. Hart was to take a satchel with the $40,000 and place it on the seat beside him and drive his son's roadster toward Los Angeles. He did not appear, so I telephoned Mr. Hart from a pay station at a parking lot in San Jose. I asked Mr. Hart why he had not kept his appointment and he told me he wanted further proof that we were holding his son. I then told Mr. Hart he must hurry and hung up.

"About noon on November 15 Holmes printed another letter, addressed the envelope and mailed this letter in the postoffice. We advised Mr. Hart that there had been some confusion and too much publicity, but if he was willing to go through with negotiations and pay $40,000 he was to put the numeral 2 in his window.

"At 5:45 on November 15 I met Holmes by a garage and he told me that the numeral had been placed in the window. We then decided to telephone Hart again, and at about 7:12 that night we drove the car in the vicinity of the Montgomery Hotel and Holmes endeavored to get in touch with Hart through a phone call. We then drove to a drug store and tried again. We then went to Sabacce Brothers' Garage on South Market and I phoned from a pay phone in the rear of the garage. I told Hart I had seen the number in the window and that Mr. Hart or some member of his family should drive the car and go at once. I told Hart I wanted his answer definitely 'yes or no.'

"I told Mr. Hart that the driver of the car would be told where he could pick up Brooke Hart as soon as he delivered the money. I told Mr. Hart I was one of the boys who wrote the letter on November 15. I also told Mr. Hart I had received my orders from headquarters and that was all I could do. About the time I finished this call I was taken into custody by Sheriff Emig. Signed Thomas Thurmond."

Attorney General Hugh S. Cummings yesterday announced the arrest of Thomas H. Thurmond and John M. Holmes, San Jose, Calif., for the murder of Hart and for complicity in attempts to obtain ransom money. He said Thurmond had confessed fully to Bureau of Investigation agents and had implicated Holmes.

"While this affair is a Federal case in that the mails were used, in view of the more serious charge of murder which will be lodged against these two men, it is contemplated the case will be turned over to State authorities for prosecution," the Attorney General said.

Police Chief Black of San Jose, Sheriff Emig of San Jose County and Police Chief Quinn of San Francisco gave "excellent cooperation and assistance to the Federal authorities," Mr. Cummings said.

H. Hansbrough, In Congress 20 Years, Dies

Former Senator Elected When N. Dakota Came Into Union.

Former Senator Henry Clay Hansbrough, 86, pioneer in North Dakota politics, died last night at his home, 3746 Oliver street, Chevy Chase, following a brief illness.

Senator Hansbrough served 20 years in Congress. He went to the Senate after 2 years in the House of Representatives. He was defeated for reelection in 1909.

Born near Prairie du Rocher, Ill., Senator Hansbrough studied the printing trade and engaged in newspaper publishing. He moved to North Dakota in 1881 and founded that State's first daily newspaper.

Elected in 1888.

He twice served as Mayor of Devils Lake, N. Dak., and in 1888 was delegate to the Republican National convention in Chicago. He later was a member of the Republican National committee, and upon admission of North Dakota to the Union he was elected to the Fifty-first Congress.

After serving two years, Senator Hansbrough did not seek reelection, but launched a campaign for the Senate. He was elected in 1891 and served continuously until 1909.

Senator Hansbrough was known in Congress as the "father of irrigation" and aided in defeating the Louisiana lottery bill.

Supported Wilson.

Although a Republican, he supported President Wilson in 1916 and in the 1932 campaign was a member of the Board of the National Progressive League.

Recently he issued an appeal to farmers, asking their support of President Roosevelt's farm program. He also supported Theodore Roosevelt and was instrumental in the latter's election as Republican vice presidential candidate.

Senator Hansbrough was the author of the "American Money Tragedy."

He made his home in Washington since 1927. There are no immediate relatives.

Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow from the J. William Lee Funeral Home, Fourth street and Massachusetts avenue northeast.

Universe Born Two Billion Years Ago, Abbe Declares

Lecturer at Catholic U. Says He Has Found "Critical Instant."

Discovery of that "critical instant" in the expansion of the universe when clusters of nebulae, of which our world is a minute part, began to take form was claimed yesterday by Abbe Georges LeMaitre, professor of physics in the University of Louvain, in an address before the 255th meeting of the Washington Academy of Sciences.

Dr. LeMaitre, who is here as a lecturer at Catholic University, outlined in mathematical formula his theory of "The Expanding Universe" and presented a modification of the gravitational equation to show that the world, as we know it, probably is only about 2,400,000,000 years old.

Explaining that at any distance beyond 200,000,000 light years scientists had to guess at what was going on, the 39-year-old priest and physicist, whose theory has won the admiration and attention of the world's leading scientists, said in this lecture he would confine himself to the "neighborhood" of Mother Earth.

The best theory as to the formation of the galaxies and clusters of nebulae, Dr. LeMaitre said, is that they were all developed at one time, some two billion years ago. His theory of an expanding universe starts with the explosion of a single atom. All matter, he believes, scattered from a single point, possibly in the form of gasses, at a velocity which he depicted in complicated mathematical formulae.

There came a moment, according to the Belgian professor's theory, when the velocity of these expanding gasses—all that then existed of what we know as the universe—slowed down.

At this "critical instant," certain regions collapsed and fell back upon themselves, to form clusters of suns, stars, moons and planets, including the earth. The expansion of the universe was resumed, with increasing velocity, extending out into what some call space and some infinity, at a rate of 12,000 miles a second.

But there was left behind the elliptical universe within the scope of scientific exploration; namely, the nebulae of our "neighborhood," within a radius of two hundred million light years.

BURLEY TOBACCO
U. S. Type 31.
SOUTHERN MARYLAND TOBACCO
U. S. Type 32.

U. S. Type 11 is produced in the Piedmont Belt of Virginia and part of North Carolina.

U. S. Type 12 is produced in eastern North Carolina.

U. S. Type 13 grows in South Carolina.

U. S. Type 14 is produced mostly in southern Georgia—a few million pounds in northern Florida and Alabama.

U. S. Type 31 includes what is called White Burley tobacco. It was first produced by George Webb in 1864. It is light in color and body, and is milder than the Burley used for pipes.

U. S. Type 32, Maryland tobacco, is noted for its "burn". In this respect Maryland excels most other tobaccos.

These are the kinds of home-grown tobaccos used for making Chesterfield Cigarettes.

Then Chesterfield adds aromatic Turkish tobacco to give just the right seasoning or spice.

Chesterfield ages these tobaccos for 30 months —2½ years—to make sure that they are milder and taste better.

Sec'y Hurley's Estate Scene Of Fox Hunt

Loudoun Hounds to Meet at Belmont for Cross-Country Chase.

Hunting fans are all agog over the meet of the Loudoun Hounds tomorrow at Belmont, country estate of former Secretary of War and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley. The huntsman's horn will ring on the hills and in the valleys of this historic estate while riders in the field will follow close behind the pack in what is expected to be a stirring chase. Red foxes abound in this section and it is not unlikely that one will be jumped shortly after the huntsmen start.

Washingtonians will be numbered among those riding, as well as members of the Middleburg Hunt, Fairfax, and Blue Ridge Hunt Clubs, who have signified their intention of being on hand for the big event. The meet on the lawn at Belmont, will also attract numbers of people to see the start. Those who love horses and hounds but who are not fortunate enough to ride will be on hand to get a thrill from the prancing steeds, eager to be away, with their red-coated riders and the hounds all primed for a big run.

Following the chase, Mr. and Mrs. Hurley are entertaining the Loudoun Hunt, their friends, and a number of guests at a hunt breakfast to which many Washingtonians have been invited.

The Hurleys purchased this historic estate in 1931. It originally belonged to Thomas Lee, of Stratford. An Imperative Discard.

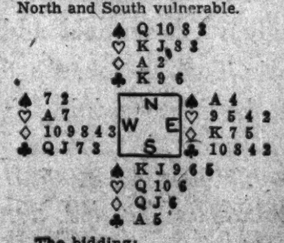
In line with our endeavor to give our partner all the information possible in defense play, we must remember that very often winning combinations which are clear to us can not possibly be foreseen by our partner. Very often a most unorthodox lead or discard is necessary in order that we may take full control into our own hands. A very surprising "come-on" discard proved to be the only means of defeating a four-spade contract on the following hand, which was played in one of the qualifying rounds for the United States Bridge Association's National Championship Tournaments. These qualifying tournaments are, of course, Duplicate games, so that in the following case it was possible to compare the results when East did and did not make the correct play.

South, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	3♠	Pass
4♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the Ace of hearts, on which Dummy played small. It was quite obvious to East that this lead was from, at most, a doubleton holding, in which case a continuation would furnish West a ruff of the third round of hearts. There was the danger, however, that West would be deterred from his original purpose when he saw the King of hearts in Dummy, and would shift to another suit, which might seem to offer a better hope of developing the necessary number of tricks. It was urgent that East command a heart continuation; and this he accomplished by playing the nine of hearts on West's Ace. West, in the face of this veritable command, could not disobey; he led the seven of hearts, and when this was won in Dummy and a small spade led, East immediately put up the Ace and returned a heart for West to ruff. The King of diamonds later furnished the setting trick.

This is a good example of cases in which encouraging discards are not based upon high-card or short-suit holdings, but purely upon the knowledge that a continuation of the suit led is imperative. Since it is a somewhat unorthodox play, many East players failed to make it, and West shifted to the Queen of clubs, hoping to find East with the Ace and Ten and cash three club tricks before South could gain the lead.

The Ace of hearts was opened at almost every table, the weakness of West's hand making a desperation lead seem necessary.

Fashions Retreat From Seminude

Paris (U.P.).—Fashion usually goes from one extreme to the other, following a fairly predictable course. Certainly this year we have gone as near to nudism as the beach laws would permit.

A miniature pair of pants, or a mere triangle of fabric more exposing than the most modest of loin cloths, each topped with a brassiere not much larger than a pair of spectacles—these represent the outside limit to which the smartest, or most daring woman can go. We are, therefore, in for a return to modesty in these frank times.

For Depression at Sweet Eighteen, Try a New Beauty Deal, Says Piquante Deb

When Lovely Anna Kilshaw Feels Downcast She Hurries to a Beauty Shop and Orders the "Whole Works"—Shampoo, Wave and Manicure; They Give Her a New Lease on Life, She Insists.

Beauty is a prize to be won by effort, say National authorities on the subject, who stress the necessity of women knowing their particular beauty type, and achieving it in perfection through proper use of cosmetics, costuming, jewelry and perfume.

This interview with a piquante Washington beauty, who candidly discusses questions of clothing and grooming, is the eleventh article in a series telling how natural beauty may be enhanced.

By Elizabeth Young.

Even beautiful, blithe, sheltered Eighteen is sometimes unaccountably depressed.

"When I do feel depressed," said elfin Anna Kilshaw Smith, decisively, "I go to a beauty parlor and get the works: Shampoo, wave and manicure. And come out feeling 100 per cent better.

"Otherwise, I never do anything about myself. Maybe I should." She shrugged; her intelligent brown eyes intently scanned her listener's face.

National authorities on beauty have cited this winsome daughter of Mrs. Lucien Green 2d, who is to be presented to society December 28, as the personification of piquante beauty; with a delightful sense of humor, an unusual slant on events, and impishly provocative features. She is one of four Washington society girls whom experts placed in this category.

Miss Smith is a fraction less than 5 feet 2 inches tall and weighs 103 pounds. She is extremely slender—"tiny" is the word to describe her—and, when interviewed, was wearing a smartly youthful frock of ankle-length, glossy black satin, made with short full sleeves and a flattering collar of white crepe de chine with lace insets, with long cravat ends.

Nothing Between Meals.

"I never eat breakfast, nor potatoes nor bread and butter; not much lunch—just a salad or something—and nothing between meals. I drink lots of beer; that's supposed to be fattening, but it doesn't fatten me; and for dinner I like meat and vegetables, but no desserts or sweets. As for milk, I hate it. I never touch it."

She says that her hair takes care of itself, other than for the shampoo—"with hot water and any good soap"—which she administers herself every 10 days. She doesn't bother to brush it, nor does her hair seem to require such forms of attention. It is a thick, brilliant black—with an amazing overtone of auburn—that curls in a saucy upturned fashion over her ears, which are half-exposed and across the back of her head.

"As for skin care, I guess I'm a testimonial for Pond's Cold Cream," she said. "That's all I ever use—just that one cream. It answers every purpose. Whenever my skin needs cleansing, when I am dressing or just before going to bed, I put Pond's cream on, leave it a while, then wipe it off and wash my face with soap and water."

Never Uses Rouge.

Her skin is a smooth, pale tan and she uses no rouge; only powder and lipstick. She never varies her make-up for daytime and evening, using Caron's beige powder and Tattoo's "Exotic" lipstick.

Her favorite perfume is Lanvin's "Scandal," a delicately seductive odor, one drop of which she touches to the curve of her throat when dressing for any occasion.

In the matter of clothing and jewelry, Miss Smith has definite preferences.

"I don't like anything but sports clothes and evening clothes," she declared. "I detest afternoon clothes. They make me look dumpy and overdressed. I like tweeds and knitted things of moderate length for daytime, in black, brown, green and gray, with a touch of something bright, a buckle or scarf or collar."

Her conception of a completely satisfactory wrap for winter days is a tweed topcoat or heavy cloth-coat with becoming collar and cuffs of silver fox fur. She cares nothing for fur coats, with the exception of a "bunny fur" wrap for evening.

"In white, I think bunny jackets the most advisable evening wrap for the younger girl," she commented. "They're inexpensive, durable and becoming."

"For evening, I like very simple dresses, made very long, without any trimming whatsoever and without ruffles or flub-dubs. Rather low cut in back, of course, but not exaggeratedly decollete. And for evening, I do like a corsage. My favorite is gardenias. You might make a note of that." She giggled.

White or black, certain golden shades of brown and unusual effects in green are her choice for winter evening gown colors. In summer she likes white—"because it is so flattering to sun tan"—made of pique or chiffon.

—"Providing the chiffon is simply made," she added. "I detest a flustery effect in clothes, as I believe I've said."

She is careful not to clutter up her costumes with jewelry at any time. The extent to which she uses it is as earrings, long rhinestone or other glittering ones for evening, small pearl button ones for dressy daytime occasions.

I have one bracelet that I am very fond of wearing," she added. "It is a small one of hammered silver, about an inch wide, with my initials on it. Bu I don't happen to have it on this present minute." She displayed bare wrists. "I don't care for rings and necklaces."

Reading Her Diversion.

"It is hard to say what is my favorite diversion. Unfortunately, I have no talents. I love to read—biographies and fiction. I happen to be in the midst of 'Anthony Adverse' just now. You must read it. I love poetry." Again, she failed to mention a fact known to her friends—that she writes charming verse. "Byron is my favorite poet, and I enjoy Masefield, Joyce Kilmer and Kipling."

Miss Smith spent part of her childhood in Southern France, and attended the Institute de Jeanne d'Arc, at Toulon, and consequently speaks French as fluently as English. She has traveled over much of this country and Europe, has visited Mexico and last summer made a trip to South America with her mother. She has studied at the Georgetown Visitation Convent, the Convent of Notre Dame in Maryland and at Gunston Hall.

She is a granddaughter of Mrs. Henry Varnum Butler, wife of Rear Admiral Butler, commandant at the Navy Yard.

Read in tomorrow's woman's page what a Washington beauty of the Wholesome type has to say about beauty care.

Underwood & Underwood.

The elusive charm of the piquante type is charmingly expressed in this trio of lovely young Washington girls. They are Miss Anna Kilshaw Smith (left), 18-year-old debutante daughter of Mrs. Lucien Green 2d, and granddaughter of Mrs. Henry Varnum Butler; Miss Betty Leach (right), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Leach, of Illinois, who have taken a house in Washington for the winter, and (below) Miss Natalie Keeney, debutante grandniece of Mrs. Sidney Kloman, with whom she makes her home.

Mrs. Roosevelt Not Preparing To Fly Plane

Though She Applied for License a Long Time Ago, She Won't Try at Present.

Mrs. Roosevelt is not going to learn to fly an airplane. This statement was made last night by Mrs. Malvina Thompson Scheider, secretary to Mrs. Roosevelt.

"Mrs. Roosevelt has not time to learn to pilot a plane," Mrs. Scheider said, "even if she could afford to buy one. It would be useless for her to learn to fly a plane when the possibility of her owning her own plane is so far in the future. By the time she could afford a plane her knowledge would be out of date.

"It is true," Mrs. Scheider continued, "that Mrs. Roosevelt did take a physical examination necessary to procure a beginner's license, but this was a very long time ago, long before she came to the White House."

Mrs. Scheider also denied the published report that President Roosevelt has refused to buy Mrs. Roosevelt a $700 airplane.

Mrs. Roosevelt probably has a record of more hours in the air than any other woman in the country out side of the professional flyers. She does not regard a trip by air to New York in the morning and back the same day as unusual. In fact, she is known as the most distinguished air commuter between here and New York. She is a good air sailor and spends her time in the plane hard at work on her letters, papers and speeches. She regards it as a trial if she has to take a train instead of a plane when she wants to make time.

Mrs. Roosevelt has given her most enthusiastic support to the development of airplane travel in this country. One of her closest friends and frequent White House guest is Mrs. Amelia Earhardt Putnam. When Mrs. Roosevelt flies with Mrs. Putnam she usually occupies the seat beside the great woman pilot.

Among the things Mrs. Roosevelt may do in the future, which probably means after she leaves the White House, is to fly an airship. She is always eager to express her interest in the development of lighter-than-air aircraft in this country. No President's wife has ever flown in an airship, but Mrs. Roosevelt has expressed a desire to fly in one and experience the joys of a trip across the Atlantic to Europe.

Mrs. Roosevelt often describes her trip across country to California and back by air last summer. She said she could have slept with as much ease as in the White House, but she was kept awake because she wanted to see the moonlight on the farms and mountains and watch the coming of dawn as she flew along.

"It was wonderful," she said. "I would like to go again. I always feel safe in the air, just as safe as anywhere else."

Va. Wine Grapes Celebrate Birthday

George Washington Held Stock in Wine Company 149 Years Ago.

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 16 (Spl.).—Exactly 159 years ago this month an Italian who had come to America to experiment in agriculture drew up a proposal for the formation of a company for the purpose of raising grapes and making wine in Albemarle County, Va.

George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and George Mason were among those who subscribed to stock. The standing committee to supervise the business consisted of the Earl of Dunsmore, royal governor of Virginia; John Page, of Rosewell; Peyton Randolph, Robert Carter Nicholas, John Blair, Thomas Nelson, jr.; Wilson Miles Cary and James McClurg.

Philip Mazzei was the Italian whose project came to nothing because of the War of the Revolution. Richard Cecil Garlick, jr., of the Romanic faculty of the University of Virginia, is the author of the first American biography of Mazzei, which has just been published by the Johns Hopkins Press, of Baltimore, under the title, "Philip Mazzei, Friend of Jefferson."

Mazzei landed in Virginia late in November, 1773, just 160 years ago. When he visited Jefferson at Monticello he was persuaded to settle on a tract of land adjoining Monticello on the east. Here he built his home, which he named Colle.

Mazzei found the Virginia soil and climate superior to that of Italy for the culture of grapes, and he wrote to Washington that he knew of no country better suited for the production of wine.

When the British first landed at Hampton, Mazzei and Jefferson joined the "Independent Company" of Albemarle as privates. Later he was sent to Europe as agent for the State of Virginia, for he had become a naturalized citizen of the Old Dominion.

Lone Coed Studies Engineering With Men

Morgantown, W. Va., (U.P.).—A bridge-building career is planned by Esther Rosalind Benford, Thomas, W. Va., the only coed in the School of Civil Engineering, University of West Virginia.

"I want to build bridges," Miss Benford said, adding that she did not believe the fact she is a woman would handicap her as a civil engineer.

"I don't see why it should. I am a fairly good mountain climber and I am not afraid of the hazardous work that may be the daily routine of any engineer."

Only three women have been graduated from the engineering school in recent years.

Sonnet.

By Katherine Smith.

Light me many candles when I die,
And let them reach into the mourning gloom
So there will be no shadows in the room
Where I am dreaming my last dreams. No cry
Of anguish utter when my eyelids close
To laughing sunshine and to sighing rain,
To green-splashed forests and to drying plain,
To summer, sleeping under sleeping snows.
And when the candles stand around my head,
I will have known the song of earth's full throat—
Deep-toned and soaring to the final note
That brought me silence; though I may be dead,
You, living, breathe, and hear and see—and you
Can never sorrow, knowing what I knew.

Hungry Waifs Find Welcome In Settlement

Christ Child Society Brings Relief to Unfortunate Families.

A woman walks quickly through the darkness of Stanton Park. It is late. She is hurrying home from the settlement house, where all day long she has ministered to the wants of forlorn and half-forsaken humans. She is tired. The click-clack of her heels on the paving is the only sound.

Then suddenly a little whimpering wail, the whimper of a child, trickles through the black. The young woman is on the alert at once. She has stopped—she is searching out the direction from which the sound comes—she is following it to the tatterdemalion clump of babyhood, half frozen with cold and fright, at the other end.

Just another little abandoned baby gathered into its fold by the Christ Child House, at 608 Massachusetts avenue northeast. Such incidents are of every-day occurrence there.

A real story? Of course. The child was from a miserable, poverty-stricken home in the Northeast section. The father had been out of a job for almost a year. There were six children—too many to feed when you have nothing to put into their mouths. The mother was discouraged, a little numbed by pain. She had not even noticed that one of the breed was gone.

Today that father has a job again. The society saw to it. The little lost girl romps in the settlement playroom with her older brothers and sisters. Other unfortunate babies are being sought up and down the city's lanes and byways, so that none this winter may know the bitter cruelty of hunger and cold.

The Community Chest drive is raising funds to carry the work on. There is so much of it to be done.

There is, for instance, the case of the little girl of 11 who was 20 pounds underweight. Slim meals can bring a child to that. Besides, she had suffered the experience of seeing her own disheartened father commit suicide before her eyes.

She is now at the Christ Child Farm for Convalescent Children in Rockville, Md., where rest, fresh air and wholesome food are gradually restoring her to health again.

"The society lends a hand to the boys, too," Miss Anna J. Keady, its executive secretary, yesterday explained. "Why, recently we held a boxing match. And as it turned out, we had a most amusing time.

"You see, we had told the youngsters they could not be admitted unless they brought their fathers along. We wanted to interest the fathers in the things we are doing for their sons.

"Some of the boys, unable to persuade their real parents to accompany them, picked themselves up 'fathers' on park benches and brought them to insure their getting in.

"But one little fellow did not think of such a ruse. He stood at the entrance for a while, alone, and then he blurted out the awful truth: His daddy was in jail. Jailed for drunkenness, leaving a wife and five small children to starve.

"Well, they all got food, and that was at least one of the good results of that boxing bout, for without it we never should have known of them.

Tiny Bouquets Sprinkle New Silk Crepes

Wild Flowers Make Huge Floral Designs on Chinese Prints.

Wild flowers have been delightfully tamed by silk manufacturers. The dainty blossoms, arranged in bouquets, are liberally sprinkled over the newest crepes.

More spectacular and just as fashionable as the wild flower prints are huge floral designs in vivid Chinese colors. These large blossoms are spaced so skilfully that a flowing, rhythmic effect is achieved.

The Chinese influence has been blended with Scotch in unusual plaids. Some of these extremely colorful patterns are broken plaid types. Others resemble the designs worn by Highland clans, but the colors are Chinese rather than Scotch.

New sports checks are created by combining bright colors with dark costume shades and white.

Small floral patterns for early spring wear are printed in variegated gay colors on dark grounds, usually navy, black, or deep brown. Excellent for tailored frocks are somber crepes with tiny white dots or lilac leaves. Less conservative are infinitesimal flowers massed in stripes.

Materials which bear these new designs most successfully are pure dye crepes in a rough spiral weave of the Roshanara type and mossy ribbed crepes.

Stafford Officers Chosen.

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 16 (Spl.).—New officers of the Stafford Community League were named last night at the league's monthly meeting, presided over by Lieut. Schuler, president.

Officers elected were: Fred Blackburn, president; Mrs. E. T. Stoner, vice president; Mrs. Nymat Sacrey, secretary; Mrs. L. D. Thomas, treasurer; Rev. Mr. Heaton, chaplain.

To Discuss Peace.

Roanoke, Va., Nov. 16 (Spl.). Dr. Bessie Carter Randolph, president of Hollins College, will discuss suggestions for bringing about world peace at the November meeting of the Roanoke Woman's Club tomorrow, according to Mrs. John W. Wright, club president. Dr. Randolph received her Ph.D. in international law at Radcliffe College.

Children suffering from lack of food, clothing and shelter are gathered into the friendly warmth of the Christ Child Settlement House, 608 Massachusetts avenue northeast, by social workers of the Christ Child Society. The Settlement House, in addition to supplying the necessities of life, gives the boys instruction in carpentry, while the girls are taught sewing, handicraft, and tap dancing.

Decollete Line Becomes Most Daring in Years

Lanvin Shows Evening Gowns With High Back and Low Front.

Revolt against the high neck has been declared by a revolutionary group of designers, gallantly led by Lanvin and Augustabernard. They're tired of seeing women swathed from chin to foot and have decided to do something about it.

This "something" consists of the most daring decolletages we've had in many a moon. Lanvin is showing evening gowns with the front slit almost to the waist. As might have been expected, when the front of the gown descends to such depths, the back is promptly yanked up across the shoulders. That doesn't mean Lanvin is not featuring the low back. She is. But not on those gowns that have the shocking new front neckline.

Augustabernard lives up to her reputation as an extremist in this manner of decolletage. She drapes her newest evening gowns high about the throat or she hacks the bodice until there is practically nothing left.

Mainbocher is also showing some low necks, but his are tempered with intricate drapery, which takes away that "naked" look.

One of the most delightful methods of achieving the low-front decolletage, according to Chanel, is to drop the gown over the shoulders in the manner of the Southern belle of a century ago.

What Today Means

"Scorpio."

If November 17 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9 to 10:15 a. m., from 3:30 to 4:45 p. m. and from 5:45 to 6:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 11 a. m. to 12 noon, from 1:15 to 2:20 p. m. and from 8:50 to 10 p. m.

You will be inclined to indulge your senses on this date and it will be not at all surprising to find you suffering from indigestion or some allied ailment. Mothers will feel the need of speaking harshly to their children and of dealing severely with them. They must, however, be careful not to carry things too far lest the lesson to be taught lose force because of ridiculous severity.

The child born on this November 17 will in all probability have little idea of money; do not bring him up "with a gold spoon in his mouth." You will find him to be an observing little one, quick to catch on to things and more willing to learn from what goes on about him and by asking questions than by studying and reading.

Born on November 17, you will more than likely require a great deal of money for your happiness. You like to do things in a "big way;" you like to impress people with your importance and you seem to feel that pomp and display, a big splurge, will accomplish the desired results. Consequently, the women do not make the best housekeepers, for they are not inclined to get down to fundamentals and what they do they do for effect rather than for beneficial and lasting results. They are not the most economical by an means and are not at all interested in routine work about the home. The men keep themselves pretty much on the jump getting things done in a business way. Fortunately they are men of ideas and can turn their talents to doing numerous things. Money comes to them fairly easily and departs from their coffers with equal rapidity. The women do not care for careers in business although they are qualified to carry on if they so choose. When reverses of a financial nature are encountered these women are quick to "grab the oars" and very often, forced into business, they succeed admirably in ventures where they must compete with men. Both sexes are not hasty to enter into marriage; they weigh the social and other material advantages to be gained and very often select their friends of the opposite sex with a direct view of what they would have to offer if love should creep into the picture.

No End of Books

Sigmund Freud, After an Interval of 15 Years, Revises His Theories of Psychoanalysis and Brings Them Up to Date in New Volume Just Issued.

Sigmund Freud breaks a silence of more than 15 years to bring up to date his theory of psychoanalysis in a book just published by Norton, entitled "New Introductory Lectures on Psychoanalysis."

In the light of discoveries and developments which have taken place in the interval, Freud now revises and amplifies the theory of dreams (remarking incidentally that he has never claimed that "all dreams are of a sexual nature,") discusses the anatomy of mental personality, anxiety and instinctual life, and the psychology of women. The various schools which have grown out of the original concept of Freudian psychoanalysis are commented on.

In a final chapter Freud makes the first general statement he has ever given of his philosophy of life, the part psychoanalysis may play in it, and its bearing on his view of religion, science and the social order.

Of Marxism, Freud says "It can not be assumed that economic motives are the only ones which determine the behavior of men in society. It is quite impossible to understand how psychological factors can be overlooked where living human beings are involved. Even if a new order of society were to emerge which will banish material want, we shall still have to struggle for an idefinite length of time with the difficulties which the intractable nature of man puts in the way of every kind of social community."

Sonneteer.

A book of poems, "THE CHASE," by Harvey C. Grumbine. (Bruce Humphries, Boston, $1.)

The most daring adventure of the poet is the sonnet. There Mr. Grumbine has earned his rating as a master and it is, therefore, with keen appreciation that the lover of the sonnet finds at hand a cross-section of his endeavors in this field.

There is vigor and dignity both in his sonnets. Readers of the best magazines have become familiar with his work.

Here is one of force and innate beauty.

The Thwarted.

They are not dead. They do not live. They hover Ever upon the brink of being. They Never have sipped the honey of the day
Or fed their eyes upon the dews that cover
The flowers of night. They know not what the lover
Whispers who lingers late; nor what men say
Who after turmoil settle down to pray
Or cease from hoping for the morrow. Over
Their tenuous shades only the moon has thrown Within her palest hour the filmies mist
Of guesses lost to sense, and fears unseen
But felt—how sharply!—as one feels a moan
Thrust from the heart and strangled in a fist
At grips with hate . . . They only might have been.

He has a novel phraselogy for nature verse. For instance, in this sonnet, "Captive," one feels the sweep of thought—the impersonation of the bee and the ants and other lowly things under the mantle of human instincts.

The Captive.

Grass-blade and clover-stem and plantain-root,
Flower of dandelion, oak-leaf dried,
With here and there a bee, its wings spread wide,
Swift wayfaring, a butterfly with loot
Pilfered from early dew, and hungry-eyed,
A spider twining nets that terrified
The armored wasp-citizen, raw recruit,
Soldier in this small kingdom. Filaments
Of silver radioing news of weather
And state of dew—that spinner's deft designing,
Not Betelgeuse nor Sirius immense
Nor yet Aldebaran tug at a tether
Contrived with art more rare or skill more shining.

This is a small book, but it has the greatness of real poetry about it. ELISABETH E. POE.

The Last Paradise.

A travelogue, "BALI, ENCHANTED ISLE," by Helen Eva Yates. (Houghton Mifflin, $3.)

"The Balinese have what might be called a communistic way of living. They help each other at harvest time, in their merrymaking, and in any time of strife. When one man's rice is ripe, all his neighbors come to help him harvest it, each taking a share of the rice for his labor. And so, in turn, they help each other. Nobody is exceedingly rich; no one is poor. It is a well-known fact that there isn't a real beggar in Bali! And of what other places on earth can you make such an assertion?"

Thus is the last paradise of travelers, according to Miss Yates—a Dutch protectorate which has replaced languorous Tahiti and inexpensive Balearica as the goal of travelers seeking uncommercialized peace and happiness.

Well illustrated, to show the wondrous native art work, the unmatched temple dancers in their lavish costume and the splendid, strange customs of Balinese burial, this small volume stands out as one refreshingly simple among the line of recent books about Bali. No phase of island beauty or habit is disregarded, and the author writes sympathetically, but not deeply, of what she has observed.

Her account of the reception given the modern moving picture by the natives, of the casting out of Nikodemus, who "liked the Bible stories that the missionary told him," of the gory "poepoetan," a procession of honor in which the native princes committed wholesale suicide in order not to submit to foreign invasion—these are high points of the book. "Gamelan," Balinese orchestra music, is described in detail, with excellent success in its attempt to explain the difficult syncopation of these native symphonies.

A brief history of Bali is added for interest, and an addenda contains an item of importance to gourmets—the recipe for the famous "rijsttatel," an elaborate Dutch curry, eaten widely in Bali and Java.

DON BLOCH.

The Dangerous Age Again.

A novel, "BACHELOR'S HEYDAY," by Micheline Keating. (King, $2.)

Mr. Cobb, with a wife off on a six months' cruise, a married son and a daughter getting rather out of hand after her debut, felt that now was the time to separate himself from domesticity and set up a pent house of his own. After all, a man had to have a place where he could entertain his friends! These called him "Jerry," they were numerous, gay and dominantly feminine and glamorous.

Out of the ensuing complications, Miss Keating makes a smart and amusing story. She is still in her twenties. Her success in the pages of the Cosmopolitan and Collier's has determined the qualities of this novel. THEODORE HALL.

Charlotte Girl To Do Portrait Of Roosevelt

Betty Anne Mosseller Will Paint No More Pirates Now.

Charlotte, N. C., Nov. 16 (AP). Betty Anne Mosseller, who is only 11, disdains the comparatively prosaic painting of petunias and pottery for pistols and pirates.

Called a "budding genius" and "promising artist," the little girl sits before her easel here daily, pallet in hand, and spreads deftly blended oils on her canvas.

For six years she has been drawing; only for four months has she been working in oil.

She likes to paint cowboys, ferocious pirates, charging horses and fliers in the air. She likes them because "they carry guns and swords and wear uniforms and can ride and fight and do things."

Her teacher says Betty Anne is going to "do things," too, if she continues to progress as she has in the past.

Now, however, Betty Anne has stopped painting vigorous subjects for a time to do a portrait of President Roosevelt. She hopes to send it to him if it's well done enough, thus following her mother, who recently sent the President a hooked rug made in the North Carolina folk handicraft fashion.

Chimes to Be Heard Soon.

Distinguished Washingtonians are accepting the invitation of the Washington Opera Club to become patrons and patronesses for the presentation of "The Chimes of Normandy" during Thanksgiving week at Roosevelt Auditorium, when on Monday and Tuesday, November 27 and 28, this new group of young Washington singers is heard for the first time in Planquette's melodious opera, under Mrs. Flora McGill Keefer's direction.

Depression Bug Chases Gloom At Card Table

Made Out of a Teasel Burr, He's a Gay Little Favor.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

They sit on the counter of an F street shop glaring at you with their white eyes, threatening you with their sharp quills, terrifying you with their look of insidious cunning.

Their yellow horns rise menacingly from narrow, evil heads. Their red and blue noses seem to be sniffing for new prey. Neither birds nor beasts, nor known insects, these Depression Bugs. As an idea they sprang from the minds of the unemployed, who took teasel burrs, painted them and fixed them over into these strange little party favors. They make novel props for place cards and bizarre table ornamentation.

It's no longer necessary to burrow deep into one's pocketbook to have innumerable wall fixtures to care for convenient lighting around the house. Automatic wall lights which run on flashlight batteries may be fastened anywhere about the house.

One in the closet will burn exactly 30 seconds and then shut off of its own accord. Or it can be regulated for continuous lighting.

This is a recent innovation in side lighting and one of the most convenient and inexpensive on the market.

White sugar and golden cream against the dark background of a black sugar and cream set give an interesting effect. But so do the brightly wrapped packages of bath salts which we find inside this new gift tempter. They have a sprightly spicy fragrance that suggests their name, Joie de Paris, and that leads us to believe that a tubful of water scented with a handful of the salts might serve as a pep-restorer after a hard shopping tour.

At any rate, here's a double gift for less than the price of one, since it's been reduced from $1 to 79 cents.

Modern women may well smile at the proverbial old Dutch housewives who used to scrub and scrape ferociously against the dirt. Simple household tasks which took them hours are trifles to us. Soiled windows and walls which refused to yield to their vigorous applications of soap and water submit easily to our modern methods. With one of the "wonder wipers" featured in the basement of a downtown store we can chase the dirt away in no time. They have rubber edges which slide along the surface and leave an unsullied trail behind them.

Half the charm of an Oriental room is the single motif which it follows. The inlaid Japanese boxes in a downtown shop have an air of Oriental fancifulness which makes them highly appropriate for a room of this kind. They consist of a large outer box and a smaller one inside, both designed in the same patterns.

Shimmering Enchantress

"Enchantment" is what Lettie Lee, Hollywood dress designer, calls this gown she did for Dorothy Revier to wear in "By Candlelight." It is of white and silver metal cloth delicately embroidered in beads. The decollete is high in front and extremely low in back, and a train adds a note of extreme elegance.

What's in Fashion?

The Brown Suits Have It Among Men's Fall Fashions

Directed by Amos Parrish

Suits of the type illustrated and their variations are available in Washington at all the better class shops.

New York, Nov. 17.—Autumn and brown, which have always had a way of getting together, have done it on a wider-than-ever scale this year. Not only in outdoor clothes, where they're perfect, but in business clothes, where they're spruce-looking. In fact, with a good number of the country's better-dressed celebrities, dark shades of brown get together and stay, all year 'round.

Whether you personally have ever been a brown-wearer before doesn't matter. It's almost certain that you can wear these new fall and winter browns, and wear them well.

Of course, men with the triple combination of hair, eyes and complexion all on the brown side can wear them to perfection. But if you're fair or red-headed, or light or sallow complexioned, you, too, can get away with these new shades.

Actually only one type of man is automatically barred from the brown suit class. He's the grayed-out type with black or white hair and sallow skin. But even he will find trying on one of these new brown outfits worth the experiment. For it may be that some element in his eyes or skin will help him to wear brown.

Newer Browns Deeper.

You'll notice, whether it's fall clothing or fall furnishings, that there is no purple or reddish cast to these new browns. This point is important. Look closely at one of the newer brown worsted suit fabrics and you'll probably find that it's one of the deep, dark wearable browns * * * grayed enough and lively enough to make it a really rich, handsome shade.

Or if you pick up a rich brown tweed or cheviot suit, you'll see that it has a gayer, lighter and more interesting color than most men have had the courage to wear in years past.

Stripe or Overplaid Adds Life.

In some brown suits for fall and winter you can see how the weavers have livened up these deep shades of brown with a white or tan stripe or an overplaid of deep red. Or maybe a stripe or a plaid worked out in another harmonizing shade of brown.

Naturally, whether a man looks smoothly well-dressed in a brown suit depends upon what he picks to wear with it. The answer to this important question is contained in a special leaflet we've prepared on this subject. Tells you what furnishings accessories to wear with your brown suit. Better send for this helpful leaflet, inclosing the coupon below.

West Virginia Girl Nets Canning Honor

Clarksburg, W. Va., Nov. 16 (Spl.). West Virginia's champion young woman culinary expert is Miss Kathryn Casto, 19, of Lorentz, Upshur County, has just been officially pronounced winner of the annual State 4-H achievement canning contest by Miss Gertrude Humphreys of Morgantown, State demonstration agent. The records of her canning the past season and for the six preceding years won her the title.

Miss Casto's records have been sent to Chicago for entrance in one of four regional contests sponsored by the 4-H organization. The winner will be entered in a national contest, for which the grand prize is a scholarship in any college or university in the United States.

If Miss Casto wins the national honor, she says she will take her scholarship at West Virginia University.

Woman of Hills Weaves Cloth For First Lady

Maggie Parton, of Smoky Mountain, Grateful for Help.

A dress length of soft white woolen homespun for a sports frock has been presented to the First Lady of America.

It is the gracious "thank-you" of Maggie Parton, humble weaver of Smoky Mountain, Tenn. The crude wood loom that Maggie works was given her by the settlement school at Gatlinburg. What it has meant to her is security and a livelihood, freedom from the haunting fear the people of hills feel in these hard times.

The mountain settlement has exhibited the work of the mountaineer women at the Corcoran Art Gallery in Washington, under the auspices of the American Federation of Arts. Mrs. Roosevelt's interest has brought many other prominent women to see the beautiful handloomed stuffs and perhaps to plan on them for their own sports costumes. So Maggie and her women friends are grateful to the First Lady for helping to bring the "New Deal" to the back woods of Tennessee.

The school at Gatlinburg is maintained by the Pi Beta Phi Fraternity, whose University of Vermont chapter was founded by another First Lady, Mrs. Calvin Coolidge. A portrait by Howard Chandler Christy, presented Mrs. Coolidge by the fraternity in 1924, hangs in the lower corridor of the White House.

The gift of the white wool homespun was made to Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House by Mrs. Stowell C. Stebbins, of Pittsburgh, assistant to Pi Beta Phi's national president.

Great Church Grew From Woman's Wish

Washington Cathedral, like most shrines of this nature, has its legend in the story of Phoebe Nourse, granddaughter of Joseph Nourse, Washington's registrar of the Treasury, who originally owned the site.

The tradition persists that Joseph Nourse, who was a devout churchman, used to kneel on the ground under the giant oaks, on what is now the Cathedral Close, and pray that some day a witness for Christ might be built there overlooking the great capital city that was to be.

The years passed, Joseph Nourse died, and no church was built there. Then Phoebe Nourse, his granddaughter, resolved to bring his dream to fruition. She made exquisite needlework and sold it and put the gold dollars, one by one, carefully away in a hairpin box.

When she died the box was found filled with 40 gold dollars, inscribed, "For a free church on Alban Hill."

The beautiful sincerity of this offering so inspired a number of friends that with these gold dollars as a nucleus a fund was started and a little church was built. The boys of a nearby school and Miss Nourse's own brother dug the foundation. On May 25, 1857, it was consecrated by Bishop Whittingham, of Maryland, the first free church in what is now the Diocese of Washington, and holding the site for the great cathedral that was to come.

Thus, the parish church of St. Alban became the mother church of the cathedral.

Thanksgiving's Festive Dishes Can Cost Little

Economist Plans Savory Holiday Meal for Family.

Thanksgiving, from the very first a day of feasting and rejoicing, may present many difficulties to the limited budget if all the ancient traditions of the feast days of yore are observed.

So a few suggestions for festive dishes which are not hard on the family budget are given by Inez S. Willson, home economist. She suggests a mock duck, made from a shoulder of lamb, as ideal for the smaller family who wants something special without extra cost.

Mock Duck.

Wrap the "duck's" head in salt pork or bacon to prevent charring. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and place on a rack in an open roasting pan. Place in a hot oven (500 degrees F.) and sear for 30 minutes, or until nicely browned. Then rapidly reduce the temperature to that of a slow oven (300 degrees F.) and continue roasting at the low temperature until done. Do not add water and do not cover. Allow about 35 minutes per pound for roasting. When done, remove "duck" from the oven and take off the salt pork or bacon from the "head." Place in the center of a platter and garnish with watercress or parsley. Half a cranberry may be stuck in place to represent the eyes. Serve with cranberry jelly.

Cranberry Jelly.

1 quart cranberries
2 cups sugar
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon cloves
1 cup water

Place these ingredients in a saucepan, cover and cook slowly until all the cranberries burst open. Press through a sieve. Put into molds which have been dipped into cold water and chill. When set, turn out of molds and serve with mock duck.

Special baked potatoes may be placed on the platter around the "duck."

Special Baked Potatoes.

Select smooth potatoes of about the same size. Wash well. Place them in the oven and bake until tender, about one hour. When done, cut a slice from each one. Scoop out the center. Mash and season with cream, salt and pepper. Whip until light and fluffy. Pile lightly into potato shells. Sprinkle with paprika and grated cheese and melt under the broiler flame.

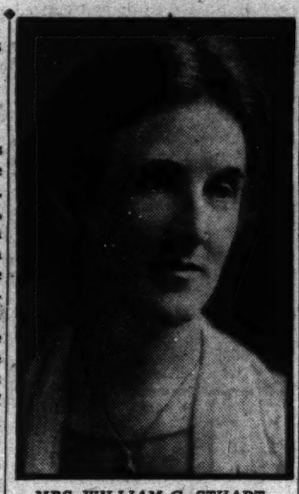
Washington Women in Welfare Work

Mrs. William G. Stuart Sees Child Guidance Clinic Adjusting Lives.

Warped and twisted personalities can be readjusted into wholesome men and women with proper care, according to Mrs. William G. Stuart, who takes an active interest in Washington welfare work through membership on the board of the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, of which she is vice president; the board of Friendship House and the board of trustees of the Community Chest. Mrs Stuart is an authority, being a graduate of the New York School of Social Work, and in addition to her membership on the Chest agency board has been chairman of the relief commission of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church for the past two years.

"My interest," she says, "has centered always in preventive, rather than relief work, particularly in the kind of work which gives the individual the opportunity to develop the best that is in him by providing a wholesome and inspiring environment, so far as possible, and by helping him to think clearly and to adjust himself mentally and emotionally to his problems. We see every day warped and twisted personalities, whose unhappy and unwholesome childhood or whose wrong way of thinking have wrecked their lives.

"The Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene is meeting and helping many of these in its child guidance clinic and its adult clinic, the Life Adjustment Center. The value of its work can hardly be estimated. Nor can we know how far and wide has gone the influence of such a house as Friendship House, which so radiates hospitality and real friendship that all feel it who step within its doors. The boys and girls whose play activities have been centered there can not fail to have felt the influence of its high standards of honesty, clean living and good citizenship."



MRS. WILLIAM G. STUART.

The Family Marketer

Market Gets Fresh Fish All Winter From North.

"The colder it gets, the farther south the boats have to go," explained the man in the fish market. "We have fresh fish on hand nearly all winter that we get from Boston or the coast of North Carolina."

"The price goes up then, doesn't it?" asked the Marketer.

"Yes, the price is going up already," the fish man stamped his feet, and rubbed his hands. "In this stall we sell trout for 15 cents a pound, salmon trout, for 20 cents. Spanish mackerel is just coming in now. It sells at 18 to 20 cents a pound. Croakers are about the best bargain, 2 pounds for 25 cents."

"What do you sell when you can't get fresh fish?"

"We have to fall back upon the frozen storage fish. It is stored at the end of the summer, but we don't sell it until the weather freezes up and we can't get the fresh."

"What about your smoked fish?" the Marketer wanted to know.

"We have Labrador herring and whitefish that we smoke ourselves; the herring is 10 cents each, the whitefish, 35 cents a pound."

Buy your fish in season, housewife, when it is possible. If you buy frozen fish at any time it should be purchased frozen and thawed at home. If you buy it fresh see that the skin is smooth and moist, that the flesh is firm. Eyes should be full and bright, and gills red. A slice of fish should hold its shape and be firmly attached to the bone. It is a good plan to buy lobsters, clams, crabs, oysters, and terrapin alive in the shell.

Once purchased, fresh fish should be cooked as soon as possible. This will eliminate danger of spoilage.

Here are a few suggestions about the relishes and sauces to serve with fish. With broiled fish sliced cucumbers or parsley sauce is good. Baked filets call for tartar sauce or shredded cabbage with green peppers. Baked stuffed fish is improved with the addition of a tomato sauce, steamed fish should have its hollandaise or egg sauce. Crisp celery, radishes or a tomato salad go well with soft creamed or scalloped fish.

Any food assumes a new distinction in the way it is served. Consider the details, and your dinner will have a real air of aristocracy.

Broiled Fish.

Split small whole fish down the back for broiling. Large fish should be cut into slices 1 inch thick.

Dry thoroughly. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and lemon juice. Place whole fish, flesh side up, on a well-greased wire broiler and broil. Turn and broil on skin side just enough to crisp the skin. Brown pieces of large fish on both sides evenly.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Fresh Vegetables for Winter Eating.

This is the season for planting vegetables to be eaten this winter if we would escape scurvy, beriberi and some eye diseases. In certain parts of the country collards will live out of doors all winter long. Leaves can be pulled from day to day, even in the coldest weather. Properly cooked fresh collards in midwinter are the best protective we have against the vitamin deficiency disorders of that season. Among these are soreness of the gums, bleeding from the gums, nose bleed, neuralgic and joint pains, constipation and certain mild skin eruptions; and the recent additions to the list, night blindness and some forms of sore eyes.

Turnips can be left out until the late fall or early winter. So long as they are out, turnip greens and turnips can be gathered fresh, properly cooked and served, making a fine source of vitamins needed in that season.

It is claimed for rutabagas and yellow turnips and their green tops that they rank with carrots as a source of vitamin A. Other vegetables not so well able to withstand cold, but which grow in the autumn months, can be stored for winter use. If properly kept they retain most of their supply of vitamins except C. Fortunately, canned tomatoes seem to equal, if not surpass, the fresh article as a source of C, and this food can be used in winter to supply what is lacking in the stored vegetables. It is well that pumpkins come in season when they do. They can be left out until well into the fall and, in addition, they store well for a while. They should approximate carrots as a vitamin source.

Sweet potatoes must be brought under cover before the ground freezes. But they keep very well in storage and are a rich source of vitamins for winter needs.

Since vegetables are eaten in winter, in considerable part, in order to get their vitamins, they should be properly cooked. Members of the cabbage family, including collards, are cooked too long. To make matters worse, soda is often added to them as they cook. Both prolonged cooking and the addition of soda are destructive to vitamins. The evil reputation cabbage has with many, the reputation of being hard to digest, is the result of overcooking. The boiled cabbage taste and odor are a product of overcooking.

World Violates Economic Laws, Says Tydings

Senator Outlines 4-Point Recovery Program at Naval Academy.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 16 (Spl.). World economic recovery was discussed today by Senator M. E. Tydings, of Maryland, in an address before midshipmen of the senior class at the Naval Academy.

The senator asserted that stabilization of currency, settlement of war debts, revival of world trade and a return to peace-time armaments, along with general governmental economy, are the outstanding policies involved in recovery. He declared world-wide violation of economic laws was directly responsible for the general depression, and said the depression could not be overcome until such violations are cured.

Senator Tydings pointed out that prior to the World War, Europe as a whole was a creditor and importing continent, and the United States a debtor and exporting country. "Our exports paid our foreign debts," he said, "and foreigners were able to pay for the goods we were sending abroad with the money we paid them as creditors."

Calls U. S. Loans Unsound.

"Since the war," Tydings said, "the countries of Europe are debtor and importing nations, while the United States is an exporting nation and creditor nation. Trade between ourselves and Europe under the circumstances is an utter impossibility. In an unsound attempt to correct this condition after the war, American investors loaned large sums in Europe to countries already in our debt beyond their ability to pay and which were buying annually from us in dollars more goods than they were selling to us.

"All these foreign loans did was to create the illusion that trade was in balance and make the inability of our foreign debtors to pay than it normally would have been. Thus in 1933 the world goes on with our customers depending upon us for raw materials and manufactured goods for which they can not pay and ourselves producing more than our people can consume, which we can not sell."

Fears More Wars.

There can be no recovery, he said, without concerted world action on four policies which he listed as follows:

A complete and final settlement of the war debt question so that matter may be relegated to the background in the future.

A revival of world trade based upon the ability of the importing nation to pay for the goods it receives.

A stabilization of international currency so that fear may be supplanted with confidence and business encouraged to go ahead.

A return to peace-time armaments and curtailment of all Government expenditures so that the burden of taxation may be minimized in every possible way.

An intensive nationalistic policy, he said, on the part of nations is likely to be the forerunner of new wars and unemployment, particularly in the United States until the wars start.

Hagerstown Asks Cut in Milk Price

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 16 (Spl.). A request that the price of milk sold to schools in Hagerstown and Washington County be reduced under the price now provided in the Philadelphia code will be made by local distributors here. A letter will be sent making this request of the Philadelphia Milk Exchange, in which area this section is located. Other counties in the same shed are making the same request.

Distributors say that with a reduction in price of ¾ of a cent a half pint, it is believed many more children will be able to purchase milk at school cafeteries. Milk has been selling at 3¾ cents.

Pieces of Eight — Sailing the Main. — By Charles B. Driscoll

Pirate Blackbeard cruised eastward, making war upon all shipping. When his men showed signs of mutiny, the Captain ordered an extra ration of rum all 'round. "No rum, Captain," reported the Mate. "Our barrels were broken in the last fight."

The men would fight and die for little or nothing, but they would not go without rum. They gathered in knots, planning mutiny. A ringleader told them, "The Captain has no right to have a woman aboard."

But just as the mutiny was about to break out in bloody rebellion a small ship was sighted. "If we take her," Captain Teach told his men, "there'll be plenty of rum for everybody." The pirates waved their caps and cheered.

Blackbeard clapped on all sail, bore down upon the unlucky ship and, without giving her a chance to surrender, drove his big ship straight into her, cutting off her stern. She began to sink at once.

Earle Theater Plans Triple Anniversary Observance—Miss Le Gallienne Guest

Fred Stone Will Be Stage Star Birthday Week

National Woman's Party to Entertain Star; a Capital Actor.

The celebration of the triple anniversaries threatens to become a fixed vogue in the local theater. One triplicate birthday observance being now in process of fulfillment in the Loew organization, the Warner Bros. Earle Theater figuratively arises in its place to remark that come Friday, November 24, it, too, will toss a three-ply celebration, taking cognizance of mile posts marking distances of from 3 years to 35.

The week cited will signalize the completion of three years of the Earle's present eminently successful combination policy of screen features and vaudeville. It would also have tolled off the completion of three full years as mistress of ceremonies for Maxine Doyle had she not chosen last September to become a big dramatic actress under contract to one of Hollywood's major producers.

While headlining the vaudeville portion of the bill booked for the week of the 24th, Fred Stone, veteran comedian and dancer of vaudeville, musical comedy and revue, will pass the thirty-fifth anniversary of the launching of his career as one of the most versatile and most beloved stars of the American stage.

Twenty Years for Fred.

Down in the orchestra trench at the same time Freddie Clark, one of the oldest musical conductors vaudeville can boast, will watch the passing of the twentieth milepost in his career of baton swinging. It has been printed in these columns before how many acts Freddie Clark has directed during the course of his 20 years in the vaudeville houses of the country, but the number has entirely slipped the memory of a commentator whose mathematical bent stops something this side of 100!

If you interrogate Mr. Clark on the subject, you will be amazed by haw far up into the thousands his score runs.

The screen feature that will accompany all of these birthday ceremonials will be "Female," the latest vehicle contrived by the Warner Brothers for the divergent talents of Ruth Chatterton. George Brent will support friend wife in this subject; and it seems eminently fitting that while all of the birthdaying is going on, Freddie Clark should be playing an overture bearing the title of "Anniversary Melodies."

It is worthy of note that more and more of the Stones are finding their way to places of eminence in the American theater. Dorothy Stone, eldest of the daughters, of course occupies a secure place as a dancer and comedienne; Paula will appear with her father at the Earle next week and just now Carol, 17, the youngest of the girls, is getting her baptism of fire on Broadway in an important role in "Spring in Autumn," a new comedy. The girls come by their love of the theater naturally. Their mother was Allene Crater, leading woman and prima donna in the Montgomery and Stone productions back in those roseate days before Dave Montgomery's untimely death disrupted one of the most famous teams the native stage has produced.

Local Boy Makes Good, &c.

When Eva Le Gallienne brings her Civic Repertory Theater Co. of New York to the National Theater next Monday night, a native Washingtonian will be a not unimportant member of her troupe.

William S. Phillips, a graduate of Western High School and a former figure of prominence in the dramatic activities of George Washington University, appears in three of the lesser roles of "Alice in Wonderland" and plays the part of Peter in "Romeo and Juliet."

Mr. Phillips' greatest fame at Western, many of his associates there will recall, was won by the excellence of his performance in the role of Francois Villon in Justin Huntley McCarthy's "If I Were King," a play that served as one of the most widely acclaimed vehicles to which the talents of the late E. H. Sothern ever were dedicated. It was in large part this performance that won Mr. Phillips a scholarship in Miss Le Gallienne's dramatic classes and this year an assignment to regular parts in her season's repertoire on the road.

Mr. Phillips' mother still makes her home in the Capital.

Miss Le Gallienne, by the way, who is one of the founders of the National Woman's Party, will speak at its headquarters, 144 B street northeast, Monday afternoon, November 20, at 3:15 o'clock. She will be introduced by Mrs. Dwight Clark and her talk will be followed by tea, which will be served with Mrs. Merritt O. Chance, wife of the former postmaster, presiding. In charge of the arrangements for the reception are the Misses Elsie Hill, Mabel Van Dyke, Anita Pollitzer and Angelina Carabelli, Mrs. Rebekah Greathouse and Mrs. Nina E. Allender. Members of the National Woman's Party and local drama groups are being invited to meet the star, whose productions will be on view next week at the National.

For Early Birds.

Beginning this morning, with the first presentations of the bill of which Jean Harlow in "Blonde Bombshell" and the stage production of "The Student Prince" are the features, Loew's Fox Theater will open its doors to the public at 9:45 with the first performance scheduled to begin at 10.

This will be continued throughout the week's engagement of this program. The earlier hour is necessitated by the magnitude and extreme length of the slightly condensed version of the famous Romberg operetta that comprises the stage show. More than 60 people are engaged in this tuneful enterprise and the piece is presented in six scenes.

Early access to the theater, furthermore, will not be a hardship to those who are accustomed to stand in line waiting for the box office to open for the first performances of the new bills as they come along. The morning breezes are not so hot these days!

With Marie Dressler, May Robson and others who have popularly been supposed to have passed their heyday surging to the forefront of the cinema's stellar ranks, it is interesting to note that Henrietta Crosman, one of the stage's most distinguished stars—where she has been a ranking artiste since 1900—has just been signed to a long-term contract by Fox Films. Miss Crosman will perhaps be best remembered by screen fans for the finely modulated portrayal she gave of Fannie Cavendish in the photoplay version of the Ferber-Kaufman play, "The Royal Family." She appeared first on Broadway as Nell Gwyn in "Mistress Nell" at the Bijou Theater, New York, almost 35 years ago, having been on the stage for a decade before that. How do you mean, "youth will be served?"

Memorial Evening.

The Arts Club of Washington will have a "Chatterton Evening" Tuesday in honor of the 153d anniversary of Chatterton's death.

A performance of Ernest Lacy's one-act play will be given by the Bankside Players with Dorothy Lawrence taking the part of Chatterton.

There will be a brief talk on Chatterton and the play by the dramatist's widow, Mrs. Ernest Lacy. Hosts for the club dinner and program will be Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Russell.

It is all very perplexing. That is to say, you can not be too careful in the matter of selecting a screen name. Take the case of Buster Crabbe, for example. When Buster was an Olympic swim champ, "Buster" was good enough. With somewhat of an increment of fame as a film star, however, Buster was deemed not quite flossy enough by the producers. So Buster's name was changed to Larry Crabbe and it is so that he will be known hereafter. This is probably due to the fact that his real name is Clarence!

Mine Host.

Carter Barron, city manager of the Loew interests in Washington, is up to his old tricks. Over this week-end he will be host, as usual, to all the hometown and visiting footballers he can get his hands on—having been one of note himself not so long ago.

George Washington U. and Tulsa and Georgetown and Carnegie Tech all will be entertained by Mr. Barron at Loew's Fox as a brief respite from forward passing and kicking at the yawning void between the goal posts.

Some of these parties have seemed to be a sort of Jonah to the hometown boys, but this week may smash the jinx, you never can tell.

Too late to bring the fern in tonight—you should have thought of it last night before the big wind came down over Chinook Pass!

RKO-Keith's

"THE RIGHT TO ROMANCE." RKO-Radio picturization of a story by Myles Connolly, starring Ann Harding, supported by Nils Asther, Robert Young, Sari Maritza and Alden Chase. Directed by Alfred Santell. Reviewed Thursday evening.

Somewhat after the style of "Mary Stevens, M. D.," Ann Harding continues the good work started by Kay Francis in bringing to the screen what might be called the human side of doctoring, especially that part concerning the medico herself.

Upon acquiring the degrees of M. D. and D. D. S., Peggy Simmons discovers that her own emotional life is being blighted by Dr. Simmons. Realizing that she is rapidly losing her individuality—anesthetized, so to speak, by the operating room's ether—she breaks away and betakes herself to the West Coast for a rest. There she falls in love with the ne'er-do-well son of one of her patients. They are married, but Bob's first infatuation reenters the picture, and an otherwise happy home is broken up. There has been, howevr, a patient, toiling scientist waiting, and Peggy finally walks out of the picture with the one she should have married.

The story is, in words, not particularly impressive; yet, as it is unfolded upon the screen, it affords Miss Harding a most admirable vehicle for another of her quietly emotional delineations. In fact, there is not to be recalled easily any of her pictures in which she has appeared more lovely, alluring or more intensely human than here.

As the flighty youth is Robert Young in one of those parts that could be distinctly repulsive in comparison with the tenderness of the principal role, yet he does it with a degree of sympathy that reveals Bob not so much a cad as one not fully cognizant of the true meaning of his feelings.

Disregarding somewhat the influence of General Yen, Nils Asther makes an excellent scientist—quiet, unobtrusive and even willing to submerge his own hopes under the wishes of the one he silently adores. Sari Maritza is the menace, and a more charming one can scarcely be imagined. Not a pleasant role is the one she is called upon to do, but, as with Mr. Young, her superb portrayal overcomes all threat of opprobrium.

Here, then, is an intensely human story that is raised to dramatic heights by the sheer force of the acting; to a point, indeed, quite beyond the inherent merit of the script. The very personality of Miss Harding suffuses the picture no less than her actual presence dominates her scenes. Orchids to Miss Harding and all her cast!

Heading the list of auxiliary attractions is "Laughing with John P. Medbury 'In the Orient,'" a sparkling auricular travesty on Far Eastern traveltalks. O. Soglow's the "Little King" comes to the cartoonal screen in "The Fatal Note," a short that is diverting without being overly hilarious. "Roamin' Through the Roses" is a musical novelty, which is too long for the amount of tuneful music or comedy it contains. A release of the Pathe News completes the list.

Columbia Players

Enthusiastic applause greeted the Columbia Players last evening at Pierce Hall when Frederick Lonsdale's "On Approval" was presented as the first of their 1933-34 series of plays.

With one of the theater's better four-character comedy-dramas, the Players' innuendo was taken and acted upon, a verdict of acceptance being unanimously rendered Dorothea Lewis, Eileen Fowler, Robert Miller and S. Allen Foster.

Upon a thesis something akin to trial marriage, Lonsdale sets out to prove that each half of an about-to-be-married couple may not be everything the other expects and that a month in the country would soon settle the matter. So the first act ends, with, apparently, little reason for the second and third.

But things are not as they seem, much to the sorrow of the two experimenting couples and the second curtain comes down with a suggested swapping of mates-about-to-be. And the third act settles the matter, with true love winning out and egocentrics left to fend for themselves.

Miss Lewis and Mr. Miller have only a slight edge on the other pair in excellence of performance, she for her ingenuous charm and understanding and he for a disarming display of consummate conceit. Miss Fowler, as the selfish widow, is more subtle with her demonstrations of conceitedness but none the less positive. Mr. Foster made a fine stolid English gentleman cast in the traditional mold.

Ably directed by Orris Holland, the cast read the Lonsdale piquancies with the assurance of veterans, save for two slips, an innocent error for each man.

Exchange Code Plan Offers U.S. Added Powers

12 Grain Markets Submit Third Measure With "Clean-Up" Rules.

Broad supervisory powers are given Secretary of Agriculture Wallace under a code of fair competition submitted yesterday by the 12 principal grain exchanges. Formal hearing was set for November 27.

The code is the third submitted by the exchanges since warned by Farm Administrator George N. Peek to "clean house." Under it fair practices would be administered by a business conduct committee for each exchange, on which Secretary Wallace would have representation.

The exchanges agree to furnish Secretary Wallace information, open all records of exchanges and members, and keep books that "will clearly reflect all financial transactions of their respective businesses, and see to it that their affiliates keep such records."

Minimum margins on open future contracts (except hedging and spreading trades) are set as follows: 10 per cent on the first 250,000 bushels, 15 per cent on the next 1,750,000, and 20 per cent on all above 2,000,000.

Post Asks 1,000 More Bargain Seats to Opera

Late Rush Nearly Finishes Half-Price Tickets to Series Next Week.

Arrangements for 1,000 additional half-price seats for the Capital's grand opera week were being negotiated by The Washington Post as a last-minute rush for tickets at the Stieff piano store, 1340 G street northwest, yesterday threatened to exhaust the supply of bargain admissions.

More than 600 bargain tickets were sold between 4:30 and 5:30 p. m. yesterday as employes of Government departments and business houses stopped on their way home to pick up remaining seats in the block the Post has arranged for distribution to its readers at half the regular price.

The International Opera Co. originally set aside 3,000 seats for each of nine operas to be presented in Washington Auditorium the week beginning Sunday. Each seat is to be sold to every person carrying a copy of The Post at not more than 54 cents. The opera company prices range up to 99 cents.

To enable readers who have not yet had an opportunity to make ticket purchases to see grand opera at the lowest prices in Capital history, The Post has asked the opera company to reserve 1,000 seats more for each performance at bargain rates.

Sale of half-priced seats will continue at the Stieff store this week and at the auditorium box office Sunday and after 6:30 evenings.

Seat sales have been heaviest for the operas "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci," Sunday night; "Carmen," Monday night; "Aida," Thursday night and for the closing performance of "Faust," a week from Sunday night.

A cast headed by Carmela Ponselle, Metropolitan prima donna; Giuseppe Martino-Rossi, well-known barytone, and Emilia Vergeri, dramatic soprano, has been rehearsing the operas in New York this week.

Crop Reduction Held Only Hope of Farmers

Indianapolis, Nov. 16 (AP).—A reduction in production offers farmers of America their only salvation, Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, said today in an address at the annual convention of the Indiana Farm Bureau, Inc.

"Our big export outlets," he said, "are definitely and surely gone. We have got to fit our production to our domestic requirements. No other power can bring us back to parity and prosperity."

Town Will Get Unsought P. O.

Government Building New Structure to Avoid Paying Rent.

In carrying out the program of building 237 new postoffices, the Federal Government is going to build some where they have not been requested.

This situation came to light yesterday when an Associated Press dispatch from Larchmont, N. Y., said no official request had been filed for a $100,000 postoffice allocated by Congress in 1930.

Postoffice Department officials explained that at the time this building was provided for, it had been determined to put up new postoffices in every city having postal receipts of $20,000 or more per month, where needed.

At Larchmont, it was pointed out, the Government has been renting space at a high cost.

Row Delays D.C. Attorney Appointment

President May Postpone Decision Until After Vacation.

Inner Patronage Circle at Variance Over Selection.

Fighting in the inner circle of patronage dispensers may cause President Roosevelt to delay naming of a United States attorney for the District until after his vacation at Warm Springs, Ga.

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings is said to have submitted his recommendation, but others close to the President are interested in the question, and the disagreement is said to have held up action expected yesterday.

Postmaster General James A. Farley and John F. Costello, Democratic National committeeman of the District, conferred with the Attorney General yesterday. William Stanley, Assistant Attorney General, who has had to do with Justice Department appointments, also was called into the conference by Mr. Cummings.

Mr. Costello said the District Democratic organization headed by John B. Colpoys and himself wanted Ralph A. Cusick named. Stanley is reported to have sought appointment of Lucian H. Vandoren, but failed to get the Attorney General to send Vandoren's name to the President as his selection.

Friends of several candidates besought the good offices of Col. Louis McHenry Howe, confidential secretary to the President, and other White House officials and friends of the Chief Executive. The President has heretofore turned a cold shoulder to the District party organization in making local appointments, but has given no indication of what he will do in this instance.

Among the several men who have been mentioned for the place are John E. Laskey, Leslie Garrett, John P. Bramhall, Michael M. Doyle and Lansdale G. Sasscer, Maryland State senator.

Staley Loses Fight for Life

Death Takes Messenger Boy Hurt by Auto as Blood Gifts Fail.

Death, kept at bay a week through gifts of blood, last night claimed Herman Staley, 21-year-old messenger, at Gallinger Hospital.

Three weeks ago Staley was injured in an auto accident. Blood poisoning set in. Relatives furnished two transfusions, but more were needed. The life fluid is expensive when taken from professional donors. An appeal was issued to Staley's fellow-messengers of the Postal Telegraph Co.

More than a score responded for tests, but only three had the proper type of blood. These three submitted to transfusions, and although doctors almost had given up hope for the injured youth, they fought on.

Another gift of blood was needed. Miss Lena L. Geesa, manager of the Press Building branch of the company, volunteered. Her blood was transferred to Staley. He lived a little longer. But last night the last efforts failed.

Board of Trade Talks to Honolulu

Development of Telephone Features Meeting.

A demonstration of the telephone development, climaxed by a conversation with Honolulu, featured the Washington Board of Trade meeting last night at the Willard.

Dr. J. O. Perrine, associate editor of the Bell System Technical Journal, described development from the time the instrument was invented by Alexander Graham Bell. During the conversation with Honolulu, Claude W. Owen, president of the Board of Trade, conversed with the president of the Honolulu Chamber of Commerce.

Melvin C. Hazen and George E. Allen, new District Commissioners, were guests. Brief talks were made by Frank J. Hogan, of the Community Chest, and Brig. Gen. Frank Keefer, chairman of the District chapter of the American Red Cross.

Roosevelt Gets Gift Of Sorghum Molasses

President Roosevelt yesterday was the recipient of five gallons of Indiana sorghum molasses, the gift of Aaron Alspach of Leiters Ford, Ind.

The molasses was presented in behalf of Alspach by Fred A. Berlin, secretary of the National Board of Trade. Berlin made a check of gifts to the President and discovered that never before was a President presented with sorghum.

Strikers Halt Work on 3 U. S. Projects Here

Postoffice Job, Heating Plant and Agricultural Building Tied Up.

Strikes by carpenters on two Federal building projects here and a jurisdiction dispute which is delaying completion of a third were disclosed yesterday.

Carpenters walked out on the Agriculture extension building more than three weeks ago and the same tradesmen struck at the central heating plant on November 7. Contractors at both buildings were reluctant to discuss the situation.

Labor officials said the heating plant strike was in protest against the alleged hiring of nonunion carpenters on Pittsburgh work by the Rust Engineering Co., contractors. The construction superintendent refused to comment, beyond admitting the men are on strike.

The Agriculture Building walkout was described by Albert Caya, union business agent, as a sympathy strike to help unionize a Chicago firm from which a subcontractor purchased materials.

A spokesman for Aronberg-Fried, contractors for the Agriculture Building, stated he does not know why the carpenters struck. The company has asked for an extension of time, he said.

The B-W Construction Co. has been powerless to start work on the conveyor system at the city postoffice addition, because both the elevator constructors and millwrights want the job. Settlement probably will depend upon the National Labor Board.

Santiago Battle Hero Gets Medal Tomorrow

The soldier who tore down the Spanish flag from a blockhouse atop San Juan Hill in the battle of Santiago will be presented the Distinguished Service Medal tomorrow.

The Spanish War veteran, Arthur Agnew, now at the Soldiers Home here, will receive the award at 10:30 a. m., from Brig. Gen. Perry L. Miles. The ceremony will be at Fort Myer.

Catholic Converts Hear Talk by Raleigh Bishop

"Happiness is for those who know the meaning of being at home in God's house," the Most Rev. William J. Hafey, D. D., Bishop of Raleigh, told the District Chapter of Catholic Converts League at its meeting last night. Nearly 300 attended the session, which opened the chapter's seventh year. Bishop Hafey spoke on "Leaving the Catholic Church."

59-Cent 'Fine'

Jimmy Lake Ordered by Court to Buy Clock.

Jimmy Lake, showman and man-about-town, walked out of Police Court yesterday in quest of an alarm clock.

He was accompanied by his 70-year-old mother, who had just told Judge John P. McMahon it was her fault her boy Jimmy failed to appear Wednesday. She said she "forgot" to awaken him because he works until 5 a. m. in his theater and beer garden.

Jimmy was to appear at 9:30 a. m. as a witness against Frank Dellebra, 20, arrested in Jimmy's beer garden and charged with carrying a concealed weapon.

"All right," said Judge McMahon, "I'll dismiss you with the order to spend 59 cents and buy an alarm clock."

Farm Buildings Will Be Linked By Single Arch

Pillars and Other Traffic Obstructions Barred in Construction.

A passageway will connect the old and new Agriculture Department buildings over B street southwest, but it will be unsupported by piers or other traffic obstructions.

Opponents of such a structure, which they said would mar the future Independence avenue besides imperiling autos, won a victory yesterday when the National Capital Park and Planning Commission approved plans for an 80-foot, single arch passageway and ended the controversy.

Previously the Treasury Department, which has contracted for the building connection, had contemplated a multiple arch passageway.

A proposal to extend Fifteenth street through the Monument Grounds was referred to Henry V. Hubbard, Harvard University member of the commission, for study.

At this morning's session members will compare notes on the field trip made yesterday afternoon to Columbia Island, Washington Airport and the proposed locations of Lee highway and the new Chain Bridge.

The afternoon will be devoted to the housing problem, with the commission adjourning at 3:30 p. m. to participate unofficially in the meeting of Commissioner Reichelderfer's advisory committee on slum clearance and low-cost housing.

Federal Unit Opens Chest Drive Today

Leaders Tell U. S. Workers Success of Cause Depends on Them.

The Federal employes' support of the District needy will be sought today as nearly 2,000 solicitors of the governmental unit open their division of the drive for Community Chest funds.

The final precampaign meeting was held last night in the Commerce Building when the chest workers were described by Dr. Ignatius Smith, professor of psychology at Catholic University, as a "consecrated party of crusaders."

Pointing out that it was only "a short step from poverty to radical revolution," Dr. Smith said the workers were "contributing to the perpetuity of the republic." He also warned them against the "certain resentment among some Government workers over salary reductions." "Some small minds," he went on, "are anxious to transfer their anger against the Government to the poor."

George Harris, another speaker, coined the slogan for the drive, "A Full Chest Means a Full Stomach." Changes in the organization of the drive to provide local speakers' units was proposed by Wallace B. Robinson, while Strickland Gillilan declared salesmanship is the keynote of the drive.

The success of the campaign for funds depends on the government unit, Elwood Street, director, told the workers. Frank A. Birgfeld, chief clerk of the Treasury, pointed out Government workers had always responded to any call on them. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, chairman of the unit, presided, while Frank Hogan concluded the program.

Penny Cafeteria Will Feed 500

Free Dinner on Thanksgiving Day Planned.

With its free soup line already overtaxed by cold weather, the One Cent Cafeteria, at 623 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, announced yesterday it is planning two more thrusts against undernourishment. A Thanksgiving dinner will be given for 500 men, women and children, and on Christmas Day the cafeteria will be host at a children's party.

Started as a hobby by Oliver L. Harr several months ago, the penny cafeteria served 42,000 free meals up to November 1.

Tickets for the Thanksgiving dinner are being distributed at churches and police stations.

Doctors in Convention At Capital Tomorrow

A postconvention of the Southern Medical Association in conjunction with the Atlantic Dermatological Conference will be held tomorrow at the Mayflower. Several hundred physicians will attend the meetings.

The local convention committee of the medical assoication is composed of Dr. Thomas A. Groover, chairman; Dr. Cary T. Grayson, vice chairman; Dr. William F. Davis and Dr. William Morgan.

Features of the convention will be a luncheon at the Georgetown University School of Medicine and an inspection of the dermatological clinic.

Georgetown Students Start Debate Series

John Henry Law, of the Edward Douglas White Law Club, class of '34, was adjudged the best individual speaker in the first public prize debate of the season last night at the Georgetown Law School. Second place went to Leonard A. Thomas, '36, of the Ashley M. Gould Club. Other contestants were Harold M. Sheehan, '34, and Charles Vinton Koons, '34. Judges were Justice James M. Proctor of District Supreme Court; Prof. Arthur A. Alexander and Edmund M. Toland.

New District Heads to Bar "Outsiders"

Hazen and Allen, Taking Control, Promise No "Carpetbagging."

Hazen Named Chairman; Cooperation Pledged by Gotwals.

Melvin C. Hazen and George E. Allen took the oath of office as District Commissioners in the board room in the District Building yesterday and promptly shut the door on "carpetbagging" in the District service.

"There will be no carpetbagging in the District government," Mr. Hazen said.

Oath of office was administered to Mr. Hazen by Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat of the District Supreme Court, and Daniel E. Garges, secretary to the Board of Commissioners, administered the oath to Mr. Allen.

Maj. Gen. Herbert B. Crosby, retiring Commissioner, presided at the ceermonies. He was acting president of the old board. Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, the other retiring Commissioner, was ill at his home.

Maj. John C. Gotwals paid tribute to the character and service of the retiring Commissioners and pledged his cooperation to the new. Maj. James R. Lusby, disbursing officer, headed the receiving line at the reception which followed. The board room was decorated with flowers and was crowded with District employes and friends of the new Commisisoners.

Mr. Hazen was elected president of the board at the organization meeting in the afternoon. Mr. Allen was designated to act as president when Mr. Hazen was absent.

Supervision of the various District departments not under the engineering commissioner were divided between the two civilian commissioners. Mr. Hazen undertook supervision of the following: Assessor, auditor, collector of taxes, police department, fire department, traffic department, weights and measures, veterinarian and the budget and expenditures of the courts and recorder of deeds.

The growing public welfare work is expected to occupy principal attention of Commissioner Allen. He will supervise the following: Health, insurance, purchasing, playgrounds, employment, examining boards, public welfare, unemployment relief, corporation counsel, coroner and the budget and expenditures of the public schools and libraries.

Attack District Heads.

Voicing resentment at the selection of the recently-appointed District Commissioners, the executive committee of the Burroughs Citizens' Association adopted unanimously a resolution last night asking the chairman of the Senate District committee to launch a thorough investigation into the legal residence qualifications of the appointees.

The investigation was requested before the appointments are confirmed by the Senate. Meeting at the home of Kenneth P. Armstrong, 1512 Kearney street northeast, members of the committee termed the new commissioners as "sorry appointments." Others expressed the opinion that "it was a slap at the District."

A resolution was adopted by the group advocating that the subcommittees of the House and Senate appropriations committees hold joint hearings on the District budget for 1935 and thereafter.

The committee favored the use of public school buildings for boy's club purposes and the appropriation of funds for directing and maintaining clubs.

A contribution to the Community Chest was voted unanimously. Raymond L. Gilbert presided.

Edward A. Dent Named Surveyor

Edward A. Dent, assistant surveyor, was named District surveyor yesterday as the first official action of the new Board of Commissioners. Mr. Dent succeeds Melvin C. Hazen, who was named Commissioner. The suveyor's term is for four years.

Mr. Dent's ability was praised by Mr. Hazen in announcing the appointment. "If we could have every office in the District filled with men as capable as Mr. Dent the city would be well off," Mr. Hazen said.

W. A. Draper was appointed resident engineer and N. C. Tayman as principal inspector to carry out construction of the P street bridge. Both have served in the Bridge Department, C. R. White, engineer of bridges, said in recommending their appointment.

'Chute Race

Four Men to Jump From Same Plane.

Four parachute jumpers will leave a single plane at two-second intervals in a race for the ground in a jumping exhibition at 4:30 p. m. Sunday at Washington Airport.

The show will be put on by the Washington Parachuters Club, and two Washingtonians, Eddie Butler and Walton Peteete, will make the jump. The others will be Capt. Smiles O'Timmons, of New Mexico, and Dick Lashua.

O'Timmons, one-armed and one-legged stunt man, and Butler will fall 2,000 feet before opening their parachutes.

Thanksgiving Contributions To Swell Post Toy Fund

Ding-How of Hydegree, first contributor to the 1933 Post Toy and Doll Fund, shown with a young playmate.

Early Gifts Bring Total to $21.30; Treasury Group Aids.

Thanksgiving offerings for The Post Toy and Doll Fund will keep needy children in Washington from a toyless Christmas this year.

Word was received yesterday that many persons were preparing to make Thanksgiving offerings to the fund between now and Thanksgiving Day.

It was felt that those in the city who have had steady work will want to contribute to The Post Toy and Doll Fund as a thanks offering at a time when so many millions of Americans have been hurt by hard times.

Send in your thank offering, large or small. Nickles, dimes and quarters will swell the fund as well as dollars if enough persons send them in. Each and every offering will be acknowledged in The Post columns. If you do not want to give in your own name send your gift in memory or in the name of some loved one.

Mascot to Give Pictures.

Ding-How of Hydegree, mascot of The Junior Post, had a splendid time yesterday. He visited The Post offices and played with Pat, a cunning 5-year-old visiting there for a time, and then had his photograph taken with several toys that had been sent in. The little boy in the picture is just a toy boy, but somehow or other, Ding and he understood each other and they promised to do their part in making The Post Toy Fund grow.

"Ask the folks to make The Post Toy Fund grow like a snowball," barked Ding-How. "And I will give to every boy and girl who brings a toy or a gift of money to the Santa Claus Lady at the Washington Building tomorrow a copy of the picture taken of me today."

Little Anne and Little Margaret, still in the 1-year-old class, each brought a dollar to The Post Toy and Doll Fund. They believe in Santa Claus and they believe in the Santa Claus Lady. They asked the Santa Claus Lady to ask other "young ladies of 1 year old" in the city to match their dollars.

Treasury Group Aids.

The nickels and dimes and quarters jingled merrily as the Blakeslie's group of the Treasury Department "passed the hat" for The Washington Post Toy and Doll Fund. They were able to send $3.55 to the Santa Claus Lady.

The Washington Post Doll and Toy Fund has become an annual institution in Washington and those familiar with it in other years have rallied to assist this year. There are recruits to the campaign. This is encouraging, for the need is greater this year than ever before.

Rent Group Fights "Double Billing"

Real Estate Men Enlisted in Campaign.

Cooperation of the Washington Real Estate Board in eliminating "double billing" for repairs, by which agents receive commissions on repair work, was asked by the Public Utilities Commission yesterday.

Request was made in a letter by J. M. Martin, executive secretary of the commission, at the suggestion of James Ring, special commission research employe investigating District rents. The real estate board's ethics code prohibits such practices.

"The commission is interested because of its relationship to rents in Washington," the commission said.

Cooper's Bank Is Not Solvent, Says O'Connor

View on United States Savings Given in Quiz on Reopening.

J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, yesterday testified before Justice Jennings Bailey in District Supreme Court that in his opinion the United States Savings Bank is insolvent.

The testimony came in the hearing on a plea by Col. Wade H. Cooper, president of the bank, to have the court order the Treasury Department to license his bank for reopening.

Mr. O'Connor declared the "absolute losses" of $306,000, which he found in the bank, according to examiners' reports, wiped out a capital structure of $100,000 and a surplus of approximately $50,000. Even, he said, if the "slow" assets of the bank were included in the calculations, the capital structure could not be repaired.

Contradictory evidence was offered by W. R. DeLashmutt, vice president, who, by recapitulating figures on the examiners' reports, wrote letters to depositors holding the bank was solvent. He said 80 per cent of the depositors had signed waivers which would exempt the bank from immediately paying 35 per cent of the claims. The total number, he said, was 13,025.

These waivers, it was contended, covered deposits of $765,000. The waiver, he said, provided that the stockholders would pay a 100 per cent assessment in five years if necessary to pay the claims.

Justice Bailey asked attorneys to speed up the case, which has been on trial about two weeks.

Two Men Convicted Of Shooting Officer

Attacked Policeman While Making Arrest.

Charged with shooting Policeman Thomas M. Carter with his own revolver, two colored men yesterday were convicted in District Supreme Court of assault with a deadly weapon. They were Joe Coster and James Hutchinson.

Carter went to a place in Brown's court, southwest, last July to arrest a man. Among places he searched, he said, was a place owned by Hutchinson. He said he broke down the door, and as he entered a bucket of lye solution came down upon his head.

While he was arresting Hutchinson, he was attacked and his weapon taken from him. Coster, he charged, tripped him. Hutchinson seized his gun and shot him through the hand.

Drive Begins With 15,000 Jobs as Goal

Civil Works Program in District Gets Under Way Today.

Employes From Relief Rolls Assured Wages Until Feb. 15.

With employment of 12,000 to 15,000 persons as its goal, the District civil works administration is to swing into action today.

Plans for immediate launching of the employment drive were given general approval at a conference yesterday of District relief and other officials with Alan Johnstone, field representative of the Federal relief and civil works administrations, of which Harry L. Hopkins is the head.

Funds for the pay of the workers will come from the $400,000,000 civil works funds set aside by President Roosevelt to provide jobs for 4,000,000 men and women during the winter.

May Have More Later.

Federal authorities fixed 12,000 as the starting number here. They allowed for employment of 3,000 more later, should projects which may be submitted by the various Federal departments be approved.

Civic works employes are to be put on a five-day 30-hour work week. They are to be paid on the basis of wage scales fixed for this section of the country, including the District, Maryland and Virginia. These range from 45 cents an hour for unskilled workers to $1.10 per hour for skilled workers.

A work program which has been prepared on the basis of recommendations submitted to Capt. Howard F. Clark, assistant engineer commissioner, by department heads, calls for the expenditure of approximately $3,458,241, and the employment of 2,202 skilled and 13,202 unskilled workers.

Gets Under Way at Once.

The employment program is to be launched immediately and contemplates continuous employment from now until February 15.

The "made" work is divided into 29 different classifications and includes water and sewer work, grading and surfacing of streets and alleys, painting of buildings and many other improvements. Most of the work is of the same character now being done by persons on the emergency relief work rolls.

Most of the workers will be taken from the relief work rolls. There now are approximately 15,000 families on the work and relief rolls of the District. The new plan will mean largely that these will be transferred to the civil works rolls. There will be a very real difference, however, inasmuch as those on the civil works rolls will be paid a full week's wages each week. Most of those on the relief work rolls now are paid only for two days work every other week.

Hopkins to Pick Directors.

Mr. Hopkins is to name the civil works administration for the District today. The District Commissioners proposed at a conference with Mr. Johnstone yesterday that they be appointed to direct the work.

District officials who participated in the earlier conference, at which projects were discussed, included George S. Wilson, director of public welfare; J. B. Gordon, sanitary engineer; Daniel J. Donovan, auditor; Capt. Herbert C. Whitehurst, engineer of highways; H. W. Baker, in charge of District construction; Leroy A. Halbert, director of emergency relief; William C. Cleary, secretary of the relief committee; Capt. Clark and George E. Clark, of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Arrested after he sent a telegram to President Roosevelt, asking protection for himself and family, Michael Papa, 43, Carpenter, Pa., was sent to Gallinger Hospital yesterday for observation.

Relief From Cold Due Today After 6 Die in East; 26 Missing

Relief from the cold wave is expected today, as the Weather Bureau predicted fair weather with rising temperature for Washington and vicinity.

Last night, however, the mercury hovered around 20 degrees, within 1 degree of the record low for November 16 recorded yesterday morning. The temperature of 19.1 tied the record set November 14, 1920, and the temperatures during the day were the lowest day-time temperatures for November 16 since 1873.

The cold drove homeless men to the Capital's mission houses and brought appeals for clothing, fuel and food. Central Union Mission, Gospel Mission and the Salvation Army were crowded.

The American Automobile Association received approximately 500 calls from motorists who could not start their cars. Only a few were frozen. Most of the trouble was caused by a combination of cold motors and weak batteries.

Record low temperatures were general from Ohio eastward, while sunny weather and higher temperatures prevailed at St. Louis, Chicago and Indianapolis, the Associated Press reported.

Six cold wave deaths were reported during the day, with a total of eight in Pennsylvania during the last few days.

One of the deaths was reported in Baltimore, where the temperature fell to 18 degrees. The body of a homeless Negro woman, Grace Brown, 32, was found in a vacant lot there. Coroner Frederick C. Link said exposure was responsible for her death.

New York experienced the coldest November 16 in 50 years, the mercury hitting 16.7 degrees. In the Adirondacks temperature as low as 20 below zero were reported.

McKean County, Pa., was under 41½ inches of snow.

Coast Guards at Buffalo began search for the steamer Adrian Iselin, carrying a crew of 22, overdue since Thursday morning. Two boats left Oconto, Wis., to search for the fishing craft Carroll, of Sumico, with three men aboard, overdue at her home port since last Wednesday.

A searching party spent a day and a night hunting for Harry Mattison, 37, a hunter, missing in central Pennsylvania since last Monday.

Good morning! Thanksgiving began here Wednesday and will last all winter with you, if you pay attention to what is going on in our store. $25 and $30 suits, topcoats, overcoats, now $19.75. $35 and $40 clothing now $24.75. These include finely tailored Schloss Brothers garments. Rogers Peet clothing also offered at Thanksgiving prices.

THE mysterious men of Tulsa will stalk across the illuminated gridiron tonight at Griffith Stadium in quest of their fourth consecutive victory over George Washington. The Tulsans are reputedly as fast and as powerful as ever. They have a new repertoire of tricks to spring on their hosts, and a triple-threat player to lead the attack, but the remodeled Colonials are 7-5 favorites to send them home on the short end of the score for the first time since the series began.

The Oilers tested their legs on the frostbitten turf of the stadium yesterday afternoon and discovered that the long train ride East had not taken much of the spring out of them. "Gloomy Gus" Henderson, the smiling leader of the squad, was visibly disappointed with the cold weather and refused to be consoled with the suggestion that tomorrow may be much warmer.

Colonials Drill in Secret.

George Washington worked out in secret and continued to battle the Freshmen who used Tulsa's deceptive formations, or as many as could be crowded into the brief space of 2½ hours. The varsity did well enough, but of course, Tulsa will be able to handle that ball more accurately than did the G. W. yearlings.

One change in the starting line-up was announced by Coach Pixlee yesterday. Bill Harrison, a chap who has been so quiet all season few people know he is even on the squad, will supplant Ed Clark, regular right tackle, who has been slowed up by the frigid weather.

"Zuzu" Stewart will be at the old stand despite rumors of his ineligibility. Max Farrington, director of athletics at George Washington yesterday issued a statement denying reports that Stewart's eligibility was being investigated, or had been questioned by any college.

Despite the Arctic-like weather which will prevail tonight according to weather reports, a sizeable throng is expected to view the game. Tulsa is among the first of the Western teams scheduled by George Washington. Four years ago the Colonials visited Tulsa and came off a bad second, so badly tricked by the Oilers it wasn't even close.

Thrilled D. C. Fans.

The Golden Hurricane blew into Washington the following year and scored a bull's-eye with local fans by their reckless, devil-may-care style of football. George Washington had the upper hand in the battle until Henderson's henchmen reached into their helmets and pulled forth a couple of grid-rabbits that confounded G. W. and sent it sliding down to defeat. The Colonials were bleary-eyed from trying to follow the ball.

George Washington's powerful line, and its fast, well-balanced back field, which clicked against Washington and Jefferson last week, figures to be too much for the visitors. G. W. will try its running game first, with "Tuffy" Leemans, Don Bomba and Finis Parrish doing most of the ball-carrying, but if stopped by Tulsa it is prepared to go into the air.

Bill Volok, Tulsa's jack of all trades, will be the marked man on the field tonight. Volok plays four positions, guard, tackle, end and wingback, and the team's offensive is built around him.

Rumblings of Mt. Baer Music To Managers of Heavyweights

NEW YORK, Nov. 16 (AP). Since the prospect of Max Baer returning to the ring for a fight in California this winter has been revived managers of heavyweights, who might be drafted to provide the opposition, are living in hopes again.

First it was Harry Lenny, manager of Ray Impellitiere, who produced a telegram from Jack Dempsey opening negotiations for a Baer match on the coast February 22, probably in San Francisco. Today Charley Harvey pilot of Young Steve Hamas, came hobbling into Madison Square Garden on his cane waving a square of yellow paper.

"I have here," he announced, "very exciting news. It's a telegram from the coast offering me a match for Hamas with Baer in Wrigley Field, Los Angeles, in December. The terms are $5,000 cash.

"What did you answer?" asked Jimmie Johnston without even taking his feet down from his desk.

"Why I'm wiring the man right back that we'll accept a $30,000 guarantee and the privilege of 30 per cent of the gate receipts."

"Why didn't you ask him for $5,000 just for having read the telegram?" asked Johnston mildly.

Harvey drew himself erect with great dignity, and what was left of what was once the most famous handlebar mustachios in fistiana quivered at the slight.

"I can see," he said cuttingly, "that I am in a promotorial rather than a managerial atmosphere. Since you've quit handling fighters you've lost your feeling for the proletariat. You are now capitalist minded."

Johnston listened sharply, suspecting an insult.

"A guy'd be feeble-minded that gave anybody a $30,000 guarantee," he said. "What's Baer going to get, a bale of hay?

"But Jimmie," said Harvey in hurt tones, "I can ask, can't I? If he's interested he can wire me to come out of the insane asylum and we'll really talk terms."

Ross Faces Fuller; Is 3-to-1 Favorite

14,000 Expected to Watch Chicago Bout Tonight.

Chicago, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Barney Ross, sleek-haired Chicago Hebrew who holds the lightweight and junior welterweight boxing titles, will risk the latter tomorrow night against Sammy Fuller, a tough little Italian from Boston, in a 10-round bout at the Chicago Stadium.

Ross' lightweight title will not be at stake, as the articles call for both boys to come in over the divisional limit of 135 pounds. Ross will weigh about 138½, Fuller 138.

Ross is quoted a 3-to-1 favorite in the newspaper odds, but there isn't likely to be any betting at those odds. They merely represent the margin by which Ross outclasses Fuller on past performances.

Yet some 14,000 persons will pay more than $20,000 to see the bout despite the fact that Ross is considered almost a certain winner.

Billy Arnold, Racer, Is Injured in Crash

Taft, Calif., Nov. 16 (AP).—Billy Arnold, of Los Angeles, winner of the 1930 Indianapolis Automobile Speed Classic, suffered a slight concussion of the brain and several fractured ribs late last night when his motor car turned over on a highway near here as he headed to a ditch to avoid a collision.

His condition was not considered serious.

G.U. Team Ends Practice for Carnegie

Scrimmages With Frosh; Starting Line-Up Is Announced.

GEORGETOWN'S FOOTBALL SQUAD went through its paces for the last time yesterday before its game with Carnegie Tech tomorrow at Griffith Stadium. A lengthy signal drill, followed by scrimmage with the Freshmen who used Carnegie plays, lasting for more than two hours, comprised the workout.

Today the squad will have a skull drill at 2 o'clock, after which the players will watch the Freshmen battle the University of Richmond Frosh on the Hilltop at 2:30 o'clock.

Coach Hagerty yesterday announced a starting line-up of Murphy and Chappa, ends; Becker and Katalinas, tackles; Kelleher and Walacavage, guards; Callahan, center; Saverine, quarter back; Viskovich and Herron, half backs, and Bradley, full back. Viskovich will do the punting in the absence of Mack Stanley, who will be held in reserve.

Has New Plays.

Georgetown will try to make its running attack work against the Plaid. It has been equipped with new plays, designed especially for the weak sections of Carnegie's defense, and the Hoyas think they can puncture Tech's line. Should the running game fail, however, Stanley and Parcells will be injected into the fray with orders to ignite the fireworks.

Carnegie has been slushing around in several inches of snow the past several days, but reports from Pittsburgh indicate that the team is none the worse for its experience. The teams probably will have a dry field tomorrow for the game, and that will be right down Tech's alley. The Plaid depends upon its light but speedy backs and a forward passing attack to gain access to enemy territory.

Spisak Takes Post.

Charley Spisak, sophomore quarter back, has supplanted Angelo Bevevino, veteran quarter back, because of his brilliant run-back of punts against Michigan State last week. "Dutch" Croft, big left tackle, will attend to the punting. A death in the family of Clyde Heinzer, veteran guard, has forced his withdrawal from the line-up, and his place will be taken by Henry Dreshar. Burzio, Tech's candidate for all-American honors, will be at the other guard position.

Carnegie will leave for Washington at noon today, arriving late tonight.

Browns Send Shea to Chisox For Grube in Catcher Deal

GALVESTON, Tex., Nov. 16 (AP). Minor league club owners today reelected officers of their association, adopted a resolution designed to curb "shoestring operators" and then set about strengthening their teams for the campaign of 1934.

W. G. Bramham, of Durham, N. C., for many years president of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, was chosen again to head the organization. His salary was raised from $6,000 to $8,500 and his term was extended from one to five years.

Mike Sexton, of Rock Island, Ill., one of the founders of the association and its president for many years, was elected an honorary president for life. John H. Farrell, of Albany, N. Y., was reelected treasurer and his salary increased to $4,250.

Shea Traded for Grube.

The principal major league deal announced by Rogers Hornsby, of the St. Louis Browns, sent Mervin Shea, catcher, to Chicago in exchange for Frank Grube, another catcher.

Among the many deals between minor league clubs was the trading of Bill Weeney, Toledo first baseman, to Rochester for Art Shires.

Ike Boone, veteran slugging outfielder, was signed to manage the Toronto team of the International League next season.

The old Western Association was revived with a nucleus of Springfield, Joplin and Bartlesville, three teams which were denied admittance to the Western League. No other cities were selected for membership immediately, although Al G. Eckert, president of the Springfield Club, said a fourth team was "certain." Tom Fairweather, of Des Moines, was elected president of the association. Eckert said all the clubs would have major league sponsors.

A number of the rule changes were adopted by the minor league executives.

Shoestring Operators.

Outstanding action was against the so-called "shoestring operators," whom President Bramham referred to as "bootleggers of franchises."

The new rule provides that any salary, commission or compensation becoming due to an operator of a franchise shall be transmitted through the office of the president of the National association and become applicable to payment of liens or claims created by the operator.

The association also voted to raise the class A player limit from 16 to 17 in case class A leagues might want to make additions at some future time.

Joe F. Carr, prominent director of the association, urged members to take a prominent part against imposition of amusement taxes. One of the proposals which failed would have liberalized restrictions on territorial baseball liens. Fear was expressed that such restriction would interfere with operations under friendly receiverships.

Callahan Signed For Vince Dundee

Title Match Scheduled at Boston, Dec. 8.

Boston, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Vince Dundee, of Newark, N. J., newly crowned world middleweight champion, today signed to make the first defense of his title against Andy Callahan, of Lawrence, in a 15-round bout at Boston Garden December 8.

Callahan is New England welterweight champion and holds a year-old victory over Lou Brouillard, of Worcester, from whom Dundee won his title by outpointing him at the Garden recently. The Lawrence boxer's latest victory was won from Mexican Garcia on the Pacific Coast. He is on the staff of Johnny Buckley, manager of Jack Sharkey, dethroned heavyweight champion.

Burnell, Racing Form Founder, Is Dead at 81

Chicago, Nov. 16 (AP).—Frank Burnell, who conceived the idea for the Daily Racing Form and founded that publication 38 years ago, died today at his winter home, Magnolia Springs, Ala., friends here said today. He was 81 years old.

Born in London, England, Burnell entered a newspaper career after coming to America. He was a former sports editor of the Chicago Tribune and the Chicago Inter-Ocean. He maintained his summer home in Long Island, New York.

Shire and 3 Mates Regain $200 Fines

Players Are Exonerated in Salary Violations.

Galveston, Tex., Nov. 16 (AP).—Appeals of Art Shires and three of his Columbus mates, who were fined $200 each last year for alleged violation of salary contract rules, were approved today by the executive committee of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues.

The fines assessed against Shires, Jim Lindsey, Gordon Slade and Charles Wilson were ordered remitted.

"It is the opinion of the committee that there was no wrongful intent on the part of these players to violate the rules of the National Association," the ruling said.

Thomas Hickey, American Association president, banished the four from the league after he said contract irregularities were disclosed.

The executive meeting today acted only on the American Association case. Other appeal cases will be decided tomorrow.

5,500 Watch Dean Drop Komar

Pins Foe in 5 Minutes; E. Dusek and Savoldi Are Victorious.

APPROXIMATELY 5,500 rassle addicts wended their way to the Auditorium last night, curious to see whether or not this "Man Mountain" Dean is a rassler. And 5,500 went home at the conclusion of the six-bout program still wondering. The 302 pounds of fat and whiskers that was Dean, escorted into the ring by his wife-manager, had little competition from Bull Komar and ended it all in less than 5 minutes.

Komar, noted for his ability to make both funny and sad faces, entertained himself and the cash customers at the start by plucking out handsful of the Man Mountain's whiskers. The latter soon became tired of this, though, picked the Bull up with a crotch hold and landed on top of him as he hit the mat following a body slam. When the big boy arose, Komar, little

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

THOSE who don't like their football straight, but prefer it with a dash of this and that, can do worse than saunter out to Griffith Stadium this evening, where George Washington plays host to a Tulsa team that shows no more regard for its host than does a cootie.

They defy every precept of orthodox football, do these Tulsa babies, who would as soon uncoil a triple fake reverse from behind their own goal line, ending in a double lateral, as they would punt. That's the kind of football this football circus from Oklahoma has always played against G. W., and with three victories over the Colonials in three games to show for their efforts, there is no reason to doubt that Tulsa will change its methods tonight.

That Play of 1931.

Tulsa's last appearance in Washington was two years ago, when the goodly gathering of fans almost toppled out of their seats as they watched the Tulsa team go goofy like a fox and manipulate the ball from deep center in their own territory across the G. W. goal line on one weird, but decisive, play.

Tulsa has no more respect for the best football minds than does a Hottentot. On their own 5-yard line in 1931, with the game still anybody's, and G. W. having the better of it, the Tulsa quarter back drops back to kick, but he never kicks. He tosses the ball to a half back, standing virtually on the goal line, and in a trice a second half back has got the ball on a triple pass and is scampering down the field for a touchdown, just like that. G. W. players were still waiting for the quarter back to punt.

Just Kept the Ball.

After three years of failure against Tulsa, Coach Jim Pixlee, of G. W., has hit upon a plan to beat the Oklahomans. Briefly put, it is Pixlee's intention to keep the ball away from Tulsa.

"That's the only way to beat them," Pixlee says. "Keep the ball away from 'em. If they don't have the ball they can't score. When they do have the ball, anything can happen. We're going to

Preston Burch, With Tambour, Wins Bowie Race Run as Memorial to His Dad

Mare Scores By 4-Length Margin

De Valera and Balios, Phipps Entry, Finish Second and Third.

Legionary, Paying $55, and Arab, at $59.80, Delight Backers.

WASHINGTON stole the show at Bowie yesterday. The occasion was the annual running of the W. P. Burch Memorial Handicap, in memory of one of America's pioneer horsemen, and for the third time a son of the beloved trainer, Preston B. Burch, of Washington, provided the winner. The horse was Tambour, 5-year-old daughter of General Thatcher, which also won the race as a 3-year-old. And so Preston Burch went to the stewards' stand, where his brother, Selby Burch, also of Washington, presented him with the silver cup, emblematic of the victory, while Tambour was being bedecked with a floral wreath.

Tambour came from last in the field of seven to take the race with Jockey Humphries' work confined to guiding. As the mare coasted across the line, De Valera, half of the H. C. Phipps entry, was three lengths back and Balios, the other half of the entry, was third and another length away.

Flying Hour Helps.

The Burch representative also had stable company in the 6-furlong contest. She was coupled with Flying Hour, the property of Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords, and the Galetian filly lent a helping hand to Tambour. It was Flying Hour that forced the early pace, carrying Glorify and De Valera along with her while Tambour was finding her racing legs far to the rear. Nearing the stretch turn, Glorify was in front, with De Valera close and Tambour eating up ground on the turn.

Humphries soon had the Burch mare ahead, however, and from the quarter pole to the wire it was only a question of how great would be the margin of victory.

Tambour was a 2-1 favorite. Heavy money showed for every entry with the exception of Glorify.

It was another cold day at Bowie and the 6,000 present pulled their heads down in their coats and tried to win enough money to burn holes in their pockets.

It was the second and last of the charity programs at the nearby course.

Trueman Horse Wins.

Washington influence in the card extended into the fifth race, when Mrs. Elmer Trueman, of Washington, saw her Ilchester, trained by her husband, win over a fair field of platers. Southard and Rock Point were closest at the finish.

Legionary, a field representative and breaking from the outside of a field of a dozen juveniles, led all to provide long-shot players with a $55 mutuel in the opener. Johnny Gilbert had the mount and probably was in a hurry to get back to the warm jocks' room. He hustled the Stewart-owned filly along to win by a half length from Patchpocket, Chrysmute, another field horse, was third.

Tony Tipton managed to keep Red John in front by a nose at the finish of the second race after a battle with Just Remember. Two lengths farther away was Wilco. Steel set the early pace but lost the lead to Just Remember. Red John then moved into the main picture and the struggle to the wire began. Favorite players were given some relief. Red John paid $5.40.

Easy Come Scores.

Easy Come made it two in a row for the choices, taking the third race with a stretch drive that found Aunt Flora second and Spoilt Beauty third. Best By Test made a bid for the purse and then faltered after suffering interference early in the 6-furlong test. Easy Come paid $5.20. It was Gilbert's second winner.

Arab won the sixth at a $59.80 mutuel and Renaissance scored a nose decision in the final.

Burch Memorial Trophy Remains Within Family as Son's Horse Scores at Bowie

Sentiment ran high at Bowie yesterday when Tambour, owned by Preston M. Burch, won the William P. Burch Memorial Trophy, named after the late Washington horseman. Seen in the presentation of the trophy are (left to right) Selby Burch, brother of the winning owner; Jockey Lee Humphries, who had the mount on Tambour; Preston M. Burch; Joseph Boyle, general manager of the Bowie track. At the right is Tambour as she returned to the winner's circle with Jockey Humphries astride.

LEGIONARY, quick to get going, sprinted into a clear lead; saved ground when put to a drive and outstayed PATCHPOCKET under strong pressure. PATCHPOCKET, hustled along from the beginning, came willingly under punishment in the final drive. CHRYSMUTE worked her way up on the outside and finished resolutely. PRIZE PACKAGE faltered badly after moving up strongly midway of the turn. CHATTERDOO was unable to threaten seriously at any stage. TRIANGULAR, a slow beginner, closed a good gap. BARTERING KATE weakened early. WAR LETTERS lost ground all the way.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED JOHN, $5.40, $3.80, $3.00; JUST REMEMBER, $10.80, $5.00; WILCO, $3.00.

RED JOHN, forced wide at the first turn, secured racing room on the inside when straightened on the back stretch, swung to the outside of JUST REMEMBER and was all out at the end. JUST REMEMBER, rated close to STEEL, displaced the latter when ready and then fought it out stubbornly in the closing drive. WILCO lost considerable ground from the start, but finished with good energy. STEEL, kept under pressure, weakened when the real issue came. GRACIAS suffered interference going to the first turn. He raced well throughout.

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $700; allowances. The Genteel. For 2-year-old fillies. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:02. Off at 2:04. Two-dollar mutuels paid—EASY COME, $5.20, $3.20, $2.40; AUNT FLOR, $34.40, $10.40; SPOILT BEAUTY, $3.00.

EASY COME, sent up on the outside with a rush when midway of the turn, opened up a safe lead when straightened into the home stretch and came away without effort approaching the finish. AUNT FLOR, improved her position gradually and held on gamely. SPOILT BEAUTY was hurried along all the way. She weakened badly in the closing furlong. BRONZED was taken wide for the entire trip. BEST BY TEST met with early interference. GOOSEFLESH began sluggishly, settled in her stride and closed fast. CALYANTHUS showed a high flight of early speed. LUCK IN tired.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800. The W. P. Burch Memorial Handicap. For all ages. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:32. Off at 2:37½. Winner, P. M. Burch's b. m. (5), by General Thatcher—Castanet. Value to winner $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47, 1:12 2-5.

TAMBOUR, allowed to reach her best stride after the start, circled her field with high speed to take command midway of the turn, and was going easily all during the final stages. DE VALERA, raced close to the leaders and on the outside, was no match for the winner when shaken up. BALIOS, taken under slight restraint early, closed stoutly when put to a drive. FLYING HOUR began tiring after a fast half mile. SPRINGSTEEL could not threaten the leaders.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:05. Off at 3:12. Winner, Mrs. E. Trueman's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ILCHESTER, $14.20, $7.00, $4.40; SOUTHARD, $4.80, $3.60; ROCK POINT, $4.00.

ILCHESTER, kept on the inside of ROCK POINT after reaching the back stretch, shook off a stern effort from CRUISING when leaving the back stretch, responded to severe punishment and just lasted to stall off SOUTHARD. The latter, forwardly placed, showed excellent courage through the last half mile and was wearing the winner down gradually. ROCK POINT saved ground in the last five-sixteenths, but hung in the closing furlong. XANDRA took a wide course from the start. She showed a strong test. FAIRLY WILD lacked early speed and went wide.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $700; claiming; for 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:41½. Off at 3:44. Winner, W. M. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ARAB, $59.80, $19.80, $10.40; HUT, $7.80, $5.00; SERGEANT HILL, $5.00.

ARAB, away clearly and hurried into a forward position, moved into command readily when approaching the home stretch and drew out steadily. HUT, taken up with the start and steered extremely wide thereafter, closed a big gap. SERGEANT HILL entered contention stoutly when leaving the back stretch and held on well after losing ground. RODRACK raced DARK VISION into defeat, but weakened in the late stages. JODHPUR came through on the inside at the final turn and bettered his position slowly. CROSS ROADS closed a good gap.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:10. Off at 4:14. Winner, Mrs. O. RENAISSANCE outran his field to the first turn, shook off WESTY'S LAD, and coming again when placed to punishment, was up in the closing strides as LOWRY outstrode CRUZ. CHIEF'S TROUBADOUR, going in his best form, moved up with a rush at the stretch turn, gained command in the closing furlong and weakened nearing the finish. FOOTSURE fell far back after the start, swung to the outside and closed a big gap. LIGHT BREEZE, slower than usual to get going, came courageously in the last half mile. REPLEVIN went evenly.

Eastern Faces Gonzagans Today

Figures to Win; St. Alban's Eleven to Take on Landon Preps.

EASTERN, in the local public high league and Landon, of the District prep schools, will bring their football seasons to a close today. The Lincoln Park Publics will entertain Gonzaga on the Eastern Field, while Landon tackles St. Alban's at the Cathedral Grounds.

Outside of the ball game, none of the contesting elevens will have anything at stake. All have tasted defeat, but the battles themselves are certain to be corkers. Eastern has lost to Tech by a lone touchdown and has been tied by Central. Gonzaga has been defeated by Central and Georgetown Prep. Consequently, in view of the records of the two clubs, the Eastern eleven is a decided favorite.

Landon-Saints Rated Even.

St. Alban's has met with reverses at the hands of Georgetown Prep and St. Christopher's of Richmond, while the Landon team, playing a comparatively short schedule, has been tied by St. Pauls. The game is a toss-up.

Central and Georgetown Prep are busily at work, despite the cold blasts of the late afternoon in preparation for their coming game Tuesday in Central Stadium. The game looms up as the best scholastic tilt of the District for this season. Central is the champion interhigh team, while Georgetown Prep is the class of the Secondary Preps. Already interest in the game has reached such proportions that the largest crowd of the scholastic grid season is expected to be on hand.

Tomorrow, Tech will journey to Richmond, where it will meet Jefferson High School of that city. Episcopal battles Shenandoah Valley Military Academy on the latter's home lot and the New York Collegiate Institute is the guest of Emerson for the day. The site of the clash as yet has not been decided, but it is expected to take place on the Monument Grounds.

Dear Fred: Bowie Race Track, Nov. 16.

The name "J. Hunter" listed among the jockeys yesterday caused no comment from the fans. It belongs to Jim Hunter, a lad who rode his first winner July 3 of this year, and now has 92 winners to his credit. He can make 98 pounds and was a sensation during the past Latonia meeting. Mose Goldblatt has signed him and he will ride for the Western division of the Whitney Stables next season. Bright Beauty is the most claimed horse in Maryland. J. Bedame now has the mare and he is the fourth owner this fall. Trainer Crouch, of the Maple Leaf Stable, brought her back to winning form a year ago and she's been earning her oats for all comers since. Two winners yesterday for the boy.

BILL.

First race—Errant Lady has been rather inconsistent, but my No. 1 clocker tells me not to give up. I'm taking his advice and I am stringing along. First Flag gave Sainted a neat battle and appears second best. Sturdy Ark for the rest.

Second race—Dyak didn't like the longer route the last time, although he gave a good account of himself. Shapes up well in this field and his real race would win it. Longford beat De Valera over at Laurel and could be mighty dangerous in this group. Wedding Ring for the show.

Third race—Cant Remember defeated a field of this kind at Pimlico and Trainer Fitzgerald has the juvenile on edge. I fear Grey Glade. Those in charge of this youngster may have had this Maryland-bred race in mind the other day. Taunton works well and may get part of the purse.

Fourth race—Despite the fact that Don Pedro is faced with stronger opposition than he whipped the other day, I'm going back. Won in a breeze on that occasion and is capable of better time. Deduce and Clarify to complete the money picture.

Fifth race—Marcasite must run back to his winning effort at Laurel to triumph in this. I am told that the filly has been rested and then worked into top form. They have picked no soft spot here, but should get a price. Prince Tokalon and Backgammon for the other places.

Sixth race—Black Target folded in that last effort, but in the previous one came sailing home. Capable of defeating this kind. Resisting for the place. Bolilee was nowhere yesterday, but today may be another day.

Seventh race—Everfair seems the most solid of those to go in the final. Fusco showed a liking for this course the other day and may be close. Takes off 6 pounds. Soeur Blanche for the show.

Palace Plays Mercury On Southwest Program

The Palace A. C. will meet the Mercurys in the outstanding sport event on the Southwest day program to be held Sunday. The game is slated for Gonzaga Field and will have as a preliminary attraction the 135-pound elevens of the same outfits.

Incidentally, both elevens are Southwest organizations, and in view of this fact, a spirited battle is expected to ensue. The Palace A. C. is the champion eleven of the 150-pound division, while the Mercury Club plays in the unlimited class.

Chung-Hoon, Nursing Injuries, May Not Be in Navy Line-up Against Princeton

Miller Gives Team Stiff Workout

New York U. Squad Is Handicapped by Cold; Cornell Ready.

Minnesota Is on Edge for Michigan; Other Gridiron Notes.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 16 (Spl.).—Stiff scrimmaging again dominated the practice session of Naval Academy gridders in preparation for the game with Princeton on Saturday, although the bulk of work was borne by second and third string varsity combinations, pitted against the forces of Squad B. The latter employed Princeton formation, while the regulars watched the scrimmage intently as part of the plan to cope with the Tigers.

While members of the regular groups were in action frequent shifts were made both in the line and back field, which was taken as an indication that Head Coach Rip Miller plans many changes in course of Saturday's battle, so that none of the mainstays will be badly used up with the Army struggle only a week away.

Chung-Hoon Injured.

The Middies probably will not have the services of Gordon Chung-Hoon, Hawaiian half back, against the Jungaleers, as he has been nursing an injury for several days. Reds Baumberger, another half back, who also was among the casuals, appears to be in good shape again, and got in today's workout for a short time.

The Middie gridders will have little respite on the trip to Princeton, as they will not leave here until shortly before 8 o'clock Saturday and will reach Tigertown about an hour before game time. The return trip has been planned as soon after the contest as praticable. Commander Harvey E. Overesch, graduate manager of athletics and football director, will have charge of the party. The regiment of midshipmen will not attend because of interference with academic routine, but Billy, the goat mascot, will be taken along and trotted up and down the sidelines.

New York Handicapped by Cold.

New York, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Cold weather and a frozen field limited New York University to a bare half-hour of preparation for the Rutgers game today. The varsity faced the scrubs in a defensive dummy scrimmage. Coach Howard Cann announced his starting back field would be Ed Smith, Charlie Siegel, Leon Smelstor and Bill Abee.

Colgate's Attack Stressed.

Hamilton, N. Y.—Colgate's running attack was stressed in a hard work-out preparing for the thirty-fifth clash with Syracuse. A dummy scrimmage made up a large part of the drill and the Maroon ball carriers looked good in it.

Cornell Invades Hanover.

Ithaca, N. Y.—The Cornell squad of 30 players left late this afternoon for Hanover and the Dartmouth game. No drill was held because of the early departure and because many players had late classes, but one is tentatively scheduled to be held at Hanover tomorrow.

Harvard Works on Defense.

Cambridge, Mass. — Harvard did what it could toward perfecting its defensive against Brown plays in a defensive dummy scrimmage, held in the baseball cage. The scrubs put on the Brown style of triple wing back offense. Cedric Janien, a sophomore, held down Capt. Johnny Dean's full back position.

Gophers in Fast Drill.

Minneapolis, Nov. 16 (A.P.).—A light but fast drill finished Minnesota's preparations today for the assault on Michigan Saturday. Getting a touch of the cold weather expected to be encountered at Ann Arbor, the Gophers ran through a lively signal workout. Coach Bierman appeared to have satisfied himself that Bob Turner can start at end. The team left last night for Jackson, Mich., where they will stay until Saturday morning.

Iowa Goes to Purdue.

Iowa City, Iowa, Nov. 16 (A.P.).—Thirty-one University of Iowa football players entrained tonight for Lafayette, Ind., where they will meet the undefeated Purdue eleven in their final Big Ten game. Coach Ossie Solem dismissed the squad from practice and will hold the final workout tomorrow in Chicago. Zud Schammel, 220-pound guard, who has been absent from practice all week, has recovered from his leg infection.

Wisconsin Prepared.

Madison, Wis., Nov. 16 (A.P.).—A long defensive workout against the freshmen who ran through Ohio State plays today ended Wisconsin's preparations for the Buckeyes' invasion. Coach Spears drilled the reserves at top speed and made no changes in the first-string eleven. Tom Fontaine and John Fish, a pair of light half backs; Leo Porett, quarter, and Capt. Smith, full back, are expected to comprise the starting back field Saturday.

use three downs before we kick, if we have to kick. In the meantime, we're going to try to ram that ball across the goal. We're going to keep pounding their line."

So, it seems, that if George Washington wins the toss this evening, George Washington will not elect to kick.

Fifty years of blindness was terminated miraculously one day last July for E. A. Griswold, of Dallas, Tex., by a pinch of snuff—and the resultant sneeze. Mr. Griswold, who is 84 years old, had been blind since he was 34. Some months before his sight returned he started taking snuff to ease a pain in the back of his head. One day he took a small pinch, sneezed heartily—and looked around to see himself in a strange world. For the next few days his life was filled with revelations—he saw automobiles and motion pictures where he had last remembered carriages and magic lanterns.

Strange as it seems, the very miracle that restored Mr. Griswold's sight also deprived him of his livelihood. For years he had supported himself by selling pencils as a blind peddler.

* * * *

The once vast herds of American bison, popularly known in this country as the buffalo, reached near extinction in 1889 when a census undertaken by governmental and private agencies revealed that only 835 wild buffalo were left. Provided with protection against ruthless hunting, the herds have increased until now they number about 20,000.

The buffalo was once a highly important animal in the New World. They ran in such gigantic herds that for mile after mile as far as the eye could see might be black with a single herd. As many as 4,000,000 buffalo were sometimes in one herd—a herd that stretched for 50 miles.

Dean Pins Komar In Five Minutes

more than a grease spot, was put together again and dragged to the dressing room.

Dusek Beats Szabo.

While the Dean-Komar fracas was disappointing, there were three bouts on the card which were better than the ordinary and which had the fans yelling frantically at times. In the feature, Sandor Szabo, the Hungarian Adonis, came out second best against Ernie Dusek. The boys, both good rasslers, gave all they had and, at times, the melee reminded of a rough and tumble. After an hour and ten minutes of toil, Dusek connected with a left to Szabo's jaw and the latter went down and never came up.

Joe Savoldi and Roland Kirchmeyer put up a mighty sweet semi-final. The latter, a veritable giant in height, gave the former Notre Dame gridman more than he bargained for and the two might have been going yet but for one little mistake on Kirchmeyer's part. After nearly half an hour of speedy milling, Roland bounded off the ropes and Savoldi met him with a kick in the pit of the stomach with both feet. The big fellow dropped to the floor with no wind in his sails; hence the name for Jumping Joe's new hold—the "drop-kick."

Vic Christy Winner.

Vic Christy and Bill Middlekauf staged the other worthwhile bout. The former, only 21 years old and looking even younger, took all the former Florida University football man could give him, including plenty of rough stuff, and still had enough left to get his man in 13 minutes with a figure-four scissors.

In the other bouts, Jack Russell hurt himself while falling shortly after his bout with John Isling started and was counted out, while Jack Sherry simply toyed with Hans Bauer, finally putting him out of misery with an airplane spin and body slam after 12 minutes.

Sherwood High Opens Play for Soccer Title

Sherwood High School soccerists, Montgomery County champions, will see action in the first round of State title play today when they meet the Brunswick High booters, Frederick County champions, on the Brunswick Field at 1:30.

Since winning the county crown with no defeats, Coach Lear has had the Sandy Spring booters practicing daily despite the bad weather. He will take a squad of 14 players on the 70-mile journey to meet the team that fell before last year's county titlists, the Silver Spring eleven, 2 to 1, just a year ago.

Episcopal Meets Washington-Lee

Game to Be Played Today at Alexandria.

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 16 (Spl.).—Episcopal High School will meet Washington and Lee here at 3 p. m. tomorrow. The game was scheduled by Athletic Director "Bick" Cardwell today when Shenandoah Military Academy informed him that it was forced to cancel the rest of its 1933 games because of numerous casualties.

The Generals will enter the game tomorrow, the underdogs, as their record this season is none too impressing.

Episcopal has had a fairly successful season, holding victories over Tech High, of Washington; Fishburne Military Academy; Gilman County School, of Baltimore, and McGuire's, of Richmond.

Arlington Vs. Bears.

The Arlington A. C. 150-pound team will play the Mulhall Bears Sunday on the Arlington field at 3 o'clock. The Bears have won all their games to date. The Bears will report Sunday at 1:30 o'clock on their own field.

District Boy Wins College Honors

coat dangles a Phi Betta Kappa key, the ultima thule of all scholars.

Machelet's real gridiron glory commenced in 1927, when, as a member of the Central High School team, he wor a place on the local "All-High Team." Sailing through his high school scholastic stint as easily as Prof. Einstein might go through an elementary arithmetic course, Michelet entered the Mercersburg Academy, where he stayed two years prepping for college.

In 1929 he entered Dartmouth where the studies didn't seem much more difficult to him than did his high school courses. In four years his work was of such a high caliber that in his senior year he never once has had to take an examination—not even a final! Right smack in the middle of all this display of brain, Michelet began to display both brain and brawn on the football field—he plays guard.

His scholastic career was climaxed when the coveted Phi Beta Kappa key, indicative of the highest in scholarship, was awarded him. His gridiron career perhaps reached its peak when Coach Fritz Crisler, of Princeton, following a 7-0 victory over Dartmouth, stated for publication that Dartmouth was the best team to oppose Princeton this year and that he was "particularly impressed by Bob Michelet."

With all his scholastic and athletic accomplishments, Bob Michelet is perhaps proudest of the fact that during his four years at Dartmouth two other honors have come to him. He is president of the senior class and president of the student council—ample testimony that he is not only brainy and brawny, but exceedingly popular with his classmates.

Dodge Quits Boat Group in Dispute

Row Over Superchargers Is Cause of Action.

New York, Nov. 16 (A.P.).—Horace Dodge, Detroit speedboat pilot, announced his withdrawal from the American Power Boat Association today in a dispute over the proposed use of superchargers in boats competing in the gold cup races.

Dodge had succeeded in pushing through a provision allowing the use of superchargers at a recent meeting of the gold cup contest board.

Today, however, George H. Townsend, president of the American Power Boat Association, declared the new rule illegal and ordered it stricken out.

Townsend pointed out that Samuel Dunsford, of Concord, N. H., already had challenged for the gold cup races of 1934 and that, under the rules, no changes in the regulations could be made without his consent. Dunsford declined to approve the superchargers, the use of which would, in effect, make virtually every one of the present gold cup boats obsolete.

C. U. Off Today To Encounter Manhattan

Bergman Confident Team Will Halt Jaspers 4th Straight Year.

A TRIFLE stiff after yesterday's light scrimmage, but confident of returning home with another scalp dangling from its belt, Catholic University's football squad will depart this afternoon for New York, where it encounters Chick Meehan's Manhattan eleven tomorrow. The game, Manhattan's last of the season, is expected to draw around 18,000 fans.

Coach Bergman is confident the Cards will stop the Jaspers for the fourth year in a row. Manhattan won the first game between the schools in 1929 by a 7-6 margin, but C. U. more than evened the count with a 20-7 win the following year and a 19-7 victory two years ago. Manhattan showed surprising strength in holding the Brooklanders to a 12-7 score last season.

Has Weight Advantage.

Manhattan will be at a disadvantage tomorrow because the Washington eleven employs the Notre Dame system of attack. Villanova and Holy Cross tried it on the Jaspers earlier in the year with disastrous results for the New Yorkers. C. U. also will have the advantage in weight. Phil Gross, 217 pounds, and Tom Nally, 215 pounds, Catholic's tackles, will outweigh any man in the opposing line.

Catholic does not have Tommy Whelan, whose brilliant broken field running almost personnally accounted for Manhattan's downfall last season, but his successor, Tom Gearty, a snake-hipped runner, will give the opposition a busy afternoon.

Manhattan is expected to make its best showing of the season tomorrow, inasmuch as it is the team's last opportunity to redeem itself before the home folks this year. Five seniors will be in the New Yorkers' starting line-up, Capt. Bill Pendergast, Ken Owen, both back field men, and Johnny Harlnett, Vin Liberto and Bill Conley, linemen.

Hitting the Headpin . . .

THE battle for the lead in the District League was on again last night. Some idea of just how close the leaders are bunched was shown at Convention Hall, where Freddie Buchholtz's Occidental Team took the first-place Temple aggregation for three games, putting the former leaders into fourth place. Occidental is now in first place by virtue of its total pinfall, but is tied with King Pin for the lead in the percentage column, the King Pinners winning the odd game from Hyattsville.

The superior rolling of Brad Manley and Earl McPhilomy was the leading factor in the restaurant team's rise to the top, the former having a 156 game and 393 set, while Earl also had a 156 for a 383 set. George Honey led the Temple Team with a 150 game and 411 set, closely followed by Frank Mischou's 394 set.

Beacon Sign Co., with Maxie Rosenberg and Bill Clampitt shooting 375 and 373 sets, respectively, hopped into third place, taking the odd game from Convention Hall.

In spite of Carl Gouchenour's 161 game, which was high for the night, the Arcadia Team won all three from Columbia, Pauline Harrison, of the victors, cashing in a 408 set.

Dutch Weidman was the big gun in Lucky Strike's clean sweep over Geogertown Recreation, rolling a 151 game for a 378 set.

The Sligo team bumped Southern Railway out of the leadership of the Takoma-Silver Spring League, winning all three games, and going into a tie for first place with Lohr Real Estate, which swept its match with the Takoma Tigers. Fritz Billiards, with Howard Parsons showing the way with a 362 set, high for the night, won all three from Takoma Sea Food, Dutch Sherbahn, of the losers, capturing high individual game with 142. In the other matches, Takoma Tailors took two from Montgomery Club and Kimbel-Lacey Co. laced the Stewart Photographers, sweeping the match.

The C. C. C. team, by winning the odd game from the leading Engineers, tightened the race for the lead in the War Department League at Arcadia, going into a triple tie at the top of the ladder with Engineers and Lithos. Curtin's (Frankies) 145 game, and Warman's (Construction) 373 set, took individual honors. Lithos' 585 game and Construction's 1,668 set were the best team efforts.

Doris Goodall, rolling with the league-leading Agriculture Juniors team, shared individual honors in the Ladies' Federal League, with Mae Perry (Agriculture), pounding the maples for a 332 set. Miss Perry's 124 game was high for the night. A 520 game and 1,500 set, rolled by the Agriculture team, took high honors.

Sholl's Cafe stole the show in the Independent League at the Lucky Strike drives, toppling the pins for a game of 618 and a 1,705 set. Crockett (Judd & Detweiler) and Bob Shanklin (Diamond Coffee Shop), led the list of individual feats, with a 146 game and 368 set, respectively.

McDonald (Hechts) 136 game and Riston (Kanns) 373 set were the best individual efforts in the Department Store League at Lucky Strike. Lansburgh's 578 game and 1,639 set was the best team effort.

Paggett Printers shared team honors with Auths in the Nation-Wide Grocers League at the Convention Hall alleys, the former's high team set of 1,448 and the latter's team game of 495, being unsurpassed.

Cohen (Schindler), with a 128 game, and Baxter (Auths), rolling a 329 set, were the best individual scores.

The Master Printers carried away the honors in the Daylight League at Convention Hall, capturing both high team game and set with 567 and 1,603, respectively. Edinger's 362 set took high for the day.

Phi Sigma, No. 1, rolling in the Inter-Sorority League at the Columbia Alleys, carried away the team honors, shooting a 483 game and 1,367 for high set. Winn (Kappa Phi Delta) shared individual honors with McWilliams (Phi Sigma, No. 1), the former having a 285 set and the latter taking high game of the night with 111.

Hoisting of Kick-Blocker Is Legal Under Grid Rules

NEW YORK, Nov. 16 (A.P.).—Oregon State can go right ahead, as far as the rules are concerned, and heave its 6-foot 6-inch center, Clyde Devine, right up into the air to block any field goal or point after touchdown tries Fordham may make in their intersectional game at the Polo Grounds Saturday.

Bill Langford, secretary of the National Rules Committee, settled that today as the experts about town scratched their heads and examined pictures of the play made in the Oregon game, only contest the Beavers have lost.

According to Coach Lon Stiner, two big tackles each take a leg on Devine just as the opposition starts a place kick play and hoist him into the air. He has blocked one kick in three tries, one got by him, and an end blocked the other while he was up there waiting.

"There's nothing in the rules," said Langford, "to bar that kind of defensive move. The defense has all kind of leeway. But it looks to me like a haphazard, hit-or-miss kind of a gesture. I doubt very much it will become popular. I never heard of anyone else ever trying it."

Kentucky U. Seeks Thomas, Reported

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Nov. 16 (A.P.).—The Tuscaloosa News said today it had learned that Coach Frank W. Thomas, of the University of Alabama, had received a letter from an official of the University of Kentucky asking if he would be interested in becoming head football coach at Lexington.

Thomas refused to be quoted in connection with the report, pointing out that his contract with the University of Alabama had been recently extended through 1935.

Maryland Uses Lightest Team Tomorrow

Line-Up Chosen to Play Hopkins Averages But 173½ Pounds.

MARYLAND will place the lightest team it has started this season on the field tomorrow at Baltimore, where it encounters Johns Hopkins in their annual game. Shifts in the line-up have reduced the Old Liners' average weight to 173½ pounds, or 9 pounds under the usual standard.

Luther Goldman, a former Tech High School star, and Stewart McCaw, both of whom have played little this season, have been assigned positions in the starting line-up, replacing Johnny Simpson and Walter Bradley, injured guards, respectively. Goldman weighs only 162 pounds, and McCaw, 175 pounds.

Callahan Is Largest.

The revised eleven which will answer the starting whistle is as follows: Lou Ennis and Bernie Buscher, ends; Ed Minion and Charles Callahan, tackles; Luther Goldman and Stewart McGaw, guards; Tom Webb, center; Dick Nelson, quarter back; Joe Crecca and Earl Widmyer, half backs, and Bucky Buscher, full back. Widmyer, who tips the beams at 158 pounds, is the smallest man on the squad, and Callahan, who scales 195 pounds, is the largest.

Cold weather yesterday kept the Terrapins indoors for the best part of the afternoon. For about an hour the team ran through signals and chased punts, and then retired to the warmer clime of the gymnasium for skull practice.

Two Regulars Out.

Hopkins will take the field minus two regulars, Billy Van Orman, star end who has a bad knee, and Don Kelly, quarterback, whose lame back will keep him on the sidelines. Bill McClean will call the signals and Sam Hopkins has been selected to handle Van Orman's position.

This will be the first time in several years that the Maryland-Hopkins game has not been played in the Municipal Stadium. Formerly, it was played every year on Thanksgiving Day at Homewood, the Bluejays home field. During the winter months the school authorities put their heads together and decided to make it a home-and-home agreement, and Hopkins selected the sight for the 1933 battle. Next year Maryland will have the say and from all indications will elect to play at College Park. Also, the game again will be played on turkey day.

Alexandria High Faces Hopewell

Hope to Avenge 25-to-0 Defeat of Last Season.

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 16 (Spl.).—Alexandria High School will journey to Hopewell tomorrow afternoon to play the high school eleven of that city. The Twins have been drilling daily for this contest and hope to avenge a 25-0 defeat of last year.

The locals are undefeated in State competition, and if victorious tomorrow, must be reckoned with when State honors are handed out.

The Twins will play Fredericksburg High School on November 24, and on Thanksgiving Day will round out their schedule at Manassas, meeting Swaveley in their annual Turkey Day game.

Giants Trade Spencer To Reds for Grantham

New York, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—The New York Giants today announced that Glenn Spencer, right-handed pitcher, has been sent to the Cincinnati Reds in exchange for Infielder George Grantham.

Because no cash was involved in the deal, it would seem at first glance that the Giants had the better of the trade. Spencer pitched in only a few games this season, while Grantham, despite his 1933 batting slump, is a valuable man.

The Giants need Grantham as a replacement for Player-manager Bill Terry, in case "Memphis Bill" is injured or unable to hold down first base for other reasons. In a recent statement, Terry admitted he wasn't as young as he used to be, and that he was looking for a good man to relieve him of some work on the busy corner, particularly when double-headers pile up.

Tropical Park Opens 22-Day Meet Dec. 30

Bowie Race Track, Nov. 16 (A.P.).—William V. Dwyer, owner of Tropical Park, Miami, Fla., anounced today that he obtained permission from the Florida Racing Commission to open his park on Saturday, December 30, and will run until January 24, a total of 22 racing days. By this move Tropical Park loses two racing days. Jack Campbell has been engaged as racing secretary.

Hickory, N. C., Nov. 16 (A.P.).—Clyde Munn, organizer for the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, said today he had been threatened by "manufacturers' agents" because of his activities in this area.

The Washington Boys' Club unlimited basket ball team (B. C. Bruins) will play the Miller Furniture Co. a practice game on the Boys' Club court tonight at 8:45.

Stocks Mount 3.6 Points in Brisk Buying

Dollar's Strong Recovery Aids Upturn; Sales, 2,576,280 Shares.

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—The dollar's strong recovery, after a familiar early sag to new lows, brought brisk buying into speculative markets during the later dealings today.

Stocks surged up 1 to around 6 points, wheat gained a couple of cents a bushel and minor commodities improved in varying degrees.

With the R. F. C. gold price holding at $33.56 for the third successive day, it was clear that Washington had decided to keep its own brakes applied to the currency, possibly in the expectation that dollar depreciation, exchange-wise, would thus be checked. The turn, however, did not come until British pound had touched $5.52⅝ and French francs 6.72 cents.

Demand for Pounds.

Around midafternoon demand for sterling suddenly dried up and that unit's extreme rise of 12⅝ cents was converted into a substatial decline on the day, francs also dropping sharply. At their low in terms of that currency, dollars had a gold value of about 58 1-3 cents, some 3 cents under the R. F. C.'s indicated level.

Several explanations were advanced for the dollar's reversal. It was suggested that a reaction was overdue, and again that stabilization was a possibility. To some it seemed that foreigners might have begun to purchase stocks in this market.

Also, rumor had it that Washington planned to tighten the lid on its foreign exchange control so as virtually to prevent the "hedging" operations which obviously had been in progress.

Dollar's Return Indicated.

That markets rallied when, according to monetary theory, they should have declined, seemed to reflect, in part, a feeling of relief over the dollar's snap-back. Furthermore, Wall Street concluded that if stabilization efforts were in the offing stocks had not discounted the dollar's current level, and there was a scramble to reduce any disparity which existed.

Trading became very sprightly, especially through the last hour, embracing particularly those industrial that hold the great inflationary appeal. Utilities, with few exceptions, were neglected.

At the strong close, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, American Telephone, Continental Can, American Can, Chrysler, General Motors, American Smelting, Kennecott, U. S. Smelting, Patino Mines, Harvester, Westinghouse and Union Carbide were up about 2 to 3 points. Allied Chemical rose 6, du Pont 5 and Case nearly as much.

Glass Stocks Buoyant.

Stocks representing the glass industry were notably buoyant, Owens-Illinois rising 5 and Hazel Atlas, 7. Oils had a busy day. Socony-Vacuum, a favorite, advanced more than a point. Rails generally improved 1 to 2 or more. Union Pacific jumped 5. Sales reached the comfortable total of 2,576,280 shares. United States Government bonds were heavy, but their market tightened a bit before the finish.

The weekly Federal Reserve statement was particularly interesting for its figures on Government security purchases. Additions to the system's portfolio in the week ended Wednesday approximated $1,500,000, the smallest increment in many weeks, whereas the "Federal" had popularly been regarded as the chief buyer of Government bonds through the recent sinking spell.

The light purchases, however, further confirmed the widely held belief that credit expansion activities of the system were to be allowed to diminish, if not cease.

New York City member banks reduced earning assets $24,000,000. The decrease was entirely in loans, which dropped $35,000,000, whereas investments rose $11,000,000. The banks' holdings of Government securities were unchanged.

Monetary Policy Now Settled

Appointment of Mongenthau Indicates Sound Money Is Out

By Ralph West Robey.

Perhaps the most effective commentary that was made upon the appointment of Henry Morgenthau, jr., as Undersecretary and Acting Secretary of the Treasury was the action of the market for Government bonds. Announcement of his appointment, together with the resignation of Dean Acheson and the leave of absence of Secretary Woodin, appeared on the news tickers in New York at about 11 o'clock Wednesday morning. The result was immediate.

Until this time Government bonds had been reasonably firm. Of course, the market was not strong. It never is any more unless artificial support is given it. Nevertheless, on Wednesday morning it was doing fairly well with enough bids in the market to take more or less any offerings being made. With the announcement of the Treasury shifts the entire atmosphere changed. Scarcely had the tickers finished spelling out the message before all strength in the market disappeared. For a few moments it appeared there might be trouble. All bids seemed to have evaporated in thin air. Quickly, however, composure was regained and the market settled down to a regular and persistent weakness, the day showing losses of between ¼ and ½ point in the active issues.

I doubt, if such a thing has ever happened before in the United States. It is, in fact, almost incredible. Think what it means to have a break in Government bonds as a result of an appointment to the headship of the United Treasury. Think of the implications involved, of the combination of circumstances necessary to bring it about, of the indication it gives of the lack of confidence by the public in the way our finances may be run, of the uncertainty it reflects among those business men upon whom our recovery from this depression rests.

Realize, further, that a mere "weak" appointment to the job of running the Treasury would not have any such effect upon the Government bond market. This is abundantly proved from some of the appointments that have been made in the past. We have had quite our share of Secretaries of the Treasury that were unprepared for such a position and of Secretaries of the Treasury that while in the position have been obviously incompetent. These, however, have never been sufficient, at least within recent times, as to cause a wave of apprehension spread over the financial district because of their selection.

Appointment Indicates Decision on Policy

What this all means, therefore, is that the appointment of Henry Morgenthau jr., has been interpreted as indicating we are going ahead with our current monetary policy. It has been accepted as proof that we are headed in the direction of inflation. It, in combination with the resignation of Mr. Acheson, implies that all present thought of sound money has been banished from Administration quarters and that no longer are those holding to this view welcome among the monetary advisers of the White House.

The appointment of Mr. Morgenthau, in other words, is notice that a policy of currency experimentation and monetary manipulation definitely is ahead of us. This, I think, should be accepted as a challenge to everyone in the United States who believes such a policy is wrong and against the welfare of the country. It is one thing to maintain silence toward a policy when it is being formulated and the arguments of all sides are being weighted; it is another thing to maintain silence after the die has been cast.

Bond Market Turns Spotty; Still Declines

Upturn of Dollar Aids Federal List; Sales, $20,147,000.

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—The bond market presented a spotty picture today as various secondary issues rallied with stocks and prime investment maturities continued to sag.

The trading volume expanded to $20,147,000, par value, from $16,653,000 yesterday, and the average for 60 domestic corporate loans declined four-tenths of a point.

Renewed pressure on United States Government securities and high-grade corporation maturities was attributed to the persistence of inflationary fears and confusion regarding the Administration's gold-buying policy.

Late Dollar Recovery.

A late recovery of the dollar, which had sunk to new low levels in foreign exchange dealings, enabled most of the Federals to close somewhat above their lows of the day, but this list finished with declines of 1-32d to 28-32ds of a point.

Gains of a point or more were recorded by such issues as those of American & Foreign Power, Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake Corporation, St. Paul, Chicago & Northwestern, Erie, Hudson & Manhattan, International Telephone and Southern Pacific.

Losers of fractions to around 3 or more included issues of American Telephone, Armour & Co., American I. G. Chemical, American International, Atlantic Refining, Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Norfolk & Western, Central Pacific, Burlington, Consolidated Gas, Delaware & Hudson, Detroit Edison, Duquesne Light, Great Northern, Louisville & Nashville, National Dairy, National Steel, Montana Power, New Orleans Public Service, North American, Pennsylvania, Public Service and St. Louis & Southwestern.

French Bonds React.

French Government 7s and 7½s reacted for losses of 4 and 2 points, respectively, as the franc halted its advance against the dollar.

The Australians dropped 2 or more points, and loans of Cuba and the Dominican Republic were down 2 to 4. French municipals were up 3 to 4, some Dutch East Indies bonds held gains of more than 2, and the Germans, Japanese and Norwegians came back a point or more.

United Kingdom 4s lost 1⅛, but the 5½s moved up 3¾ points.

Cotton Climbs 50 Cents in Active Buying

December Closes at 10.19 as General Market Advances 11 to 15 Points.

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Cotton rose 50 to 75 cents a bale today on buying promoted by the action of wheat and securities markets. March contracts advanced from the early low of 10.24 to 10.43 in the late trading and closed at 10.42, with the general market ending very steady at net advances of 11 to 15 points.

Trading was comparatively quiet and fluctuations rather irregular until late in the session when demand from trade sources lifted prices 14 to 17 points. Closing quotations were within a point or two of the best on most positions.

Price fixing for both foreign and domestic account was said to have been more active, and while there were overnight reports of somewhat freer spot offerings, little hedging was reported here during the afternoon.

Exports today 48,112 making 2,915,936 so far this season. Port receipts 40,877. U. S. port stocks 3,998,409.

Exports Drop 17 Per Cent In Argentina

A decline of 17 per cent was registered in Argentina's export trade in the first nine months of 1933 compared with the corresponding period of last year, according to a report from Consul John W. Bailey, jr., Buenos Aires, made public by the Commerce Department.

Argentine export shipments during the 1933 period were valued at 378,161,437 gold pesos compared with 456,737,575 gold pesos for the first nine months of 1932. Imports into Argentina in the January-September period of the current year increased by 5.4 per cent over the corresponding period of 1932, rising from 276,100,799 gold pesos to 290,882,647 gold pesos.

Because of the unfavorable export situation, the report points out, Argentina's balance of trade was adversely affected, and for the first time this year the favorable trade balance shows a decrease compared with the corresponding period of the preceding year. The favorable balance of trade for the first nine months of 1933 amounted to 88,278,790 gold pesos compared with 180,636,776 gold pesos for the corresponding period of 1932.

Little relative change occured in the positions of the various countries trading with Argentina, the report shows. Great Britain ranked first both as a purchaser of Argentine products and as a supplier of Argentine imports. Shipments to Great Britain in the first nine months of 1933 accounted for 32 per cent of total exports while Argentine receipts from that country constituted 21.5 per cent of total imports.

Belgium ranked second as a destination of Argentina's exports in the nine-month period under review, with the Netherlands third, the United States fourth, Germany fifth and France sixth. After Great Britain, the chief countries exporting to Argentina in the order of importance were the United States, Germany, Italy, France and Brazil.

(Par value of Argentine gold peso equals 96.48 cents, U. S. currency).

Japan Pushes Transparent Paper Output

Production of transparent cellulose sheeting is increasing rapidly in Japan, according to advices to the Commerce Department from Assistant Trade Commissioner D. W. Smith, Tokyo. This development has been particularly noticeable since December, 1931, when the gold embargo act made the price of imported French and American paper prohibitive.

Manufacture of this type of paper in Japan began in 1928, the report shows, production in that year being valued at 5,000 yen. In 1931, output had risen to 64,500 kilos valued at approximately 100,000 yen. While official production figures for 1932 are not yet available, it is estimated that output in that period amounted to about 500,000 yen. The capacity of Japanese mills making transparent cellulose sheeting is being extended and it is estimated locally that production in 1934 will be in the neighborhood of 12,000 reams per month.

Not only have Japanese mills produced a sufficient quantity of this product to meet domestic requirements, but because of the low price at which it is offered, they are finding a ready market abroad. Australia and Canada are the principal markets for Japanese transparent cellulose sheeting at the present time, and small quantities are also shipped to the United States, the Netherlands, India and China. Official statistics do not classify exports of this item separately but they are known to be steadily increasing.

Nickel Income Increased to $3,773,130

Lake Shore Mines Co. Votes to Pay Extra Dividend.

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Net profit of the International Nickel Co. for the third quarter ended September 30 amounted to $3,773,130, equal to 22½ cents a common share contrasted with net loss of $189,098 in the same quarter last year.

In nine months the company's net profit was $5,636,019, equal to 28½ cents a common share against a deficit of $292,352 for the first nine months in 1932.

Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. has declared a dividend of 50 cents, payable December 15 to stock of record December 1, as compared with 25 cents in each of the three preceding quarters this year. The payment was designated as "the fourth distribution for the year 1933."

Lake Shore Mines Co., a Canadian gold producer, has declared an extra dividend of 50 cents in addition to the regular quarterly disbursements of 50 cents, both payable December 15 to stock of record December 1. Similar extras were paid six months and a year ago.

Raybestos-Manhattan, Inc., reports net profit of $694,777 or $1.08 a share for the nine months ended September 30 on sales of $8,196,271. In the same period of 1932 the company had net loss of $185,811 on a sales volume of $6,344,704. September quarter profit was $465,380, compared with loss of $68,211 in the same period last year.

Fajardo Sugar Co. reports net loss of $49,086 for the year ended July 31, against profit of $702,412 for the previous fiscal year.

North American Light & Power Co. reports net loss of $490,849 for the year ended September 30 after charges, including preferred dividends of subsidiaries. This contrasts with net income of $1,075,763 for the 12 months ended September 30, 1932.

The report of Addressograph-Multigraph Corporation for the period ended September 30, 1933, shows net operating profit, before depreciation and special charges, of $143,171 for the third quarter of 1933, against $106,378 in the second quarter and $37,227 in the third quarter last year. After interest, depreciation, amortization, preferred dividends and other charge-offs, net loss for the third quarter amounted to $20,869, compared with a net loss of $45,714 in the second quarter and $75,199 in the third quarter last year.

Failures Drop To Lowest in Many Years

New York, Nov. 16.—Dun's Insolvency Index for October was 76.6, the lowest for that month in a great many years. With the exception of September, for which month the Insolvency Index was 71.0, the October figure also was below that for any month covering the same period of time. For October, 1932, and also for the same month in 1931, when conditions for both years were greatly disturbed by the adverse influences prevailing in practically all countries, Dun's Insolvency Index was high. A year ago it stood at 137.8 for October, and 134.7 for that month in 1931.

Going back to the five years, 1925-1929, inclusive, when the economic position was much more nearly normal, the Insolvency Index for October was 90.2, the average for the five years. There was a decline for October this year, compared with the five years above mentioned, of 13.6 points. This is a rather extraordinarily large reduction.

Another comparison, which also tells an important story, is the advance shown from September to October this year, against that in other years. Reference to the record of the past indicates that the low point of the year is almost always reached in September. For five years, 1925-1929, inclusive such was the case. The October Insolvency Index was then three points higher than that for September, which may be considered a normal advance. There was great irregularity throughout all of 1931 and 1932, the Insolvency Index for each month being high. This year, the October Insolvency Index was 5.8 points above that for September. Furthermore, the reduction in the Insolvency Index from January to October this year has been 102.8 points; for the five years, 1925-1929, inclusive, the average for October was 49.3 points below that for January for the same period.

The figures printed in the accompanying table are computed on the basis of the number of commercial insolvencies to each 10,000 firms in business:

U. S. Workers Map Job Drive To Aid 3,700

Reemployment of Ousted Government Employes Will Be Urged.

Jobs for the 3,700 dismissed and furloughed Federal workers on the Civil Service reemployment register will be sought in a drive to be launched next week by the District Federation of Federal Employes.

Miss Gertrude McNally, national secretary, announced yesterday a meeting of the newly formed employment stabilization committee will be held next Wednesday to discuss campaign plans. Headed by John W. Ginder, District federation president, committee membership includes the presidents and secretaries of all local unions.

Leaders said the committee would canvass every Government agency in Washington and urge preference for trained men and women on the reemployment register instead of employment of persons with political backing. Detailed information on all persons of the reemployment register wil be submitted.

The drive, Miss McNally declared, will be extended to the field by federation members in all parts of the country. She reported preliminary work already has resulted in new positions for many dismissed workers.

The Dividing Line

between GOVERNMENT and PRIVATE CHARITY

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt says, "The Government can only provide food, clothing and shelter for the thousands of the destitute unemployed who are needy this Winter. You would not want the Government to do everything if it could, because it would mean higher taxes, which means we would have to pay for it, and once taxes are up, it is hard to get them down again."

The Community Chest still has the vital responsibility of raising money for the agencies that depend upon it for funds. These member agencies must see that little babies are kept warm and properly fed . . . that old folks are sheltered from the world and smilingly face the end of life's journey . . . that sick and injured receive proper hospital and nursing attention . . . that jobless men will find that priceless boon, a chance to work at a position . . . that handicapped children will get their chance at life . . . that families and individuals who are destitute because of other reasons than unemployment will receive relief and help to help themselves . . . and that young folks will be kept from delinquency and crime.

3c for Campaign Expenses.

Case Is Turned Over to Justice Department for Solution.

The problem of solving the country's outstanding unsolved crime—the Lindbergh kidnaping and murder—was officially turned over to the Department of Justice yesterday.

Several files, stacks of reports, information, false clews, suggestions, purported "inside dope," and investigation summaries were turned over to the Justice Department by the Bureau of Internal Revenue. The mass of documents represents all that the Federal Government knows about the case.

Discussing the task which lies ahead of his department, Attorney General Hugh S. Cummings stated that strenuous efforts will be made by his Bureau of Investigation to find the perpetrators of the crime.

"Our task now is to discover the criminals and bring them to justice," he said. "We're out to do that, and we won't be content until we have succeeded."

Several weeks of diligent study of the material turned over by the Revenue Bureau awaits J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Bureau of Investigation, and his staff, now skilled in kidnap work as a result of the wave of kidnapings which followed the Lindbergh case.

Up to yesterday, the sole Government agency active in the Lindbergh case was a single agent of the intelligence unit of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

The New Jersey State police will continue in the case, the Attorney General explained, but they will have the assistance of the Department of Justice men.

"Cap" Stubbs — The Ensemble! — By Edwina

Walt Mason, Himself

The Day After.

This world is fine, a fellow thinks, when primed with alcoholic drinks; his head's alive with buoyant thoughts, inspired by richt gude williewaughts. His fears and troubles fade away, the landscape that was bleak and gray becomes a flower-bespangled lea, its contours fine and good to see. He's full of iridescent dreams, of noble and uplifting schemes; he'll do big things before he dies, he'll show the world he's great and wise. He'll write a book, an ode or play that will outlive his mortal day; he'll run for Congress, and when there aspire to Presidential chair. All honors seem within his reach; of all the pebbles on the beach he is the smoothest by all odds; he feels he ranks among the gods. And so upon his couch he sinks, steamed up by alcoholic drinks, and when the morning comes along he'll face the world superb and strong. But when the morning comes he wakes a reservoir of frightful aches. The landscape that he gloated o'er seems darker now than 'twas before. His high ambitions seem absurd, and by remorse he's vainly stirred; while at the pump he soaks his head, he only wishes he were dead; depression strikes his jaded soul, as it has struck his hard-earned roll, and he keeps crying, sad and sore, the raven's legend, "Nevermore."

Floating Island Airway Held Up In PWA Office

Ickes Denies Cash Ready; Defense in War Cited as Problem.

A misunderstanding between two Cabinet officers developed yesterday when Secretary of the Interior Ickes declared no funds have yet been allotted by the Public Works Administration for the construction of an experimental seadrome, as announced the day before by Commerce Secretary Roper.

The public works administrator said the Commerce Department's application for $1,500,000 was still pending in a subcommittee and must await action of the whole Public Works Board.

Secretary Roper said he understood the project had been approved. He announced detailed plans Wednesday whereby the Commerce Department hoped to construct five $6,000,000 seadromes to span the ocean.

Secretary Ickes told newsmen a number of questions were involved, including defense of the seadromes in case of attack and legality of using public works funds outside the United States.

The initial allotment of $1,500,000 asked by the Commerce Department would be used to build a quarter section of one seadrome. The floating island would be tugged to sea for testing before the other units were decided upon.

Eastern Air Transport and the management of Washington Airport have adjusted their differences and the air transport company no longer is looking for another Washington landing field, it was learned yesterday.

Capt. Thomas B. Doe, president of Eastern Air Transport, said he would return to Washington Monday and continue his efforts to have the Federal Government, with public works money, purchase the airport.

Samuel Soloman, vice president of National Aviation Corporation, owner of the field, declared his company would not oppose Federal purchase of the airport. But, he added, his company is not sponsoring the move.

Interest Lifts Gas Valuation

Reproduction Estimate Is Given Commission by Company Witness.

Valuation experts employed by the Washington and Georgetown Gas Light companies added several thousands of dollars to their estimated reproduction costs for interest at 7 per cent during the estimated two years it would take to reproduce the companies, August C. Klein, company witness, testified at the gas valuation hearings before the Public Utilities Commission yesterday.

Mr. Klein said his estimate for interest during construction was based on the theory that the entire sum required would be borrowed at the beginning, although he admitted most of it would not be needed for some time after the work had been begun.

He estimated that it would cost $475,000 to organize the company. He also included taxes, which would have to be paid during the reproduction period before the company began to sell its product. He based his tax estimate on the $3,289,000 appraisal of company land by company appraisers. He admitted, however, that the assessed value, on which the District would levy taxes, are only $1,370,979.
